13. Commission Comments/Questions

Commissioner Richards:

So, interestingly enough, first of all I'm elated that I looked down and we have new monitors and things. Everything is crystal clear when somebody puts something up on the overhead I'll be able to read it now and not try to squint. Congratulations San Francisco for being in 2018. I have a couple of things to talk about today, nothing huge, but I wanted to just kind of triangulate. We think here in San Francisco that everything that's happening from a land use and housing point of view pretty much happens to us and we're special and nobody else in the world is experiencing things, but there is an article that -- and I don't get MacLean's, but Maclean's is a publication from Canada and there is an article this week in Maclean's and it's entitled “Andy Yan, the Analyst to Expose Vancouver's Real Estate Disaster.” I really suggest anybody who wants to really understand what's happening in Vancouver, people that have held Vancouver up as the model for what we should be doing in real estate should take a look at it. What basically, the synopsis to the article is, this person was able to figure out through public records, access, etc., who was actually buying the homes that were being created in Vancouver and one of the neighborhoods that he first chose, two thirds of them did not come from Vancouver. They actually came from outside of Canada. He further went on and did some more investigation and found that it wasn't only that these buyers were coming in, they weren't paying cash, and they were actually getting mortgages. So, HSBC and CIBC, the two major banks in Canada, were also in on the act. Then he went further and found that the people that were building the condos were in on this whole kind of system and in the very last portion of the article, he found that the people that were running the city were in on it. So, this whole kind of bubble in Vancouver wasn't being caused by outside groups, it was being caused by everybody who was benefiting from the bubble. It's a really, really good article. Along the same lines in Bloomberg -- again, I don't get Bloomberg, but I read it on my phone, just this morning there was an article about New York's vacancy rate. Besides all the bad actors, there was short term rentals, etc., one of the paragraphs jumped out at me, even though they have a what they consider a low vacancy rate of their apartment units, 4%, one of them said more problematic and predictive is units are held for occasional, seasonal and recreational use. It is growing at a big clip in New York. I know we have talked about vacancy tax here and about vacancies, I think we should take a look at a couple of these articles and really try to understand how we can understand truly what's happening, who's consuming the housing that we're building and whether it's actually being used or not or used for occasional, recreational or seasonal. In Brooklyn, there was an article in the "New York Times" Sunday. We talked about reno-evictions here, well it is happening in Brooklyn, too. The article is, in Brooklyn, “The Path to a Shelter Began with Repairs.” It talks about people who are getting repaired out of their apartments because they can't be there while the construction is happening and they go away for a while and one thing leads to another and pretty soon, a year goes by, and they can't afford to move back into their apartment and they become homeless. It is a really good article. Two other things, Sunday the 18th on the Chronicle’s front page, a really good article about short term rentals and a good analysis around what neighborhoods they are, how much they get for each rent and the big thing was the amount of short-term rentals that actually fell off the rolls when we required a valid registration number. I don't know if you recall we had this discussion in May of 2015 here and it is finally actually coming true. Lastly, Dean Macris, a former Planning Director, co-authored piece in Sunday’s Insight questions for candidates on how San Francisco sees its future. I thought it was a really spot-on article, not just talking about housing, but all the other things that need to happen when you start adding population and vision for what that would look like so another good article. Sorry for the long thing but, wow, housing seems to be on everything I touch today.

Commissioner Melgar:
First of all, I just wanted to say thank you to Commissioner Richards. You are like a Lexis/Nexis for Planning for media stuff, it is really great. You just add so much to this Commission. Thank you. So a couple of weeks ago there was another article in CityLab, “How to Design Cities for Children” by Mimi Kirk, which reminded me how far we have to go in this city. Even though we talk a lot about retaining families and how those issues are also related to workforce and the quality of our schools and a whole host of other things. So, I was reminded of Sue Exline’s excellent presentation with our team about the definition of family housing and I’m wondering what happened to that. I think defining what family housing is, is sort of a first step and then I was thinking, a couple of meetings ago, two or three meetings ago, we approved a project that was on a corner; do you remember that? That had two stories of residential housing and commercial storefront out in the avenues and I was thinking that is the perfect place for family housing; right proximity to shops and wouldn't it be great if somehow we could incentivize that commercial space to be child care and wouldn't it be great if we could figure out a way to have the open space that is required to be shared with child care. Could there be something creative that we could do to leverage our existing tools? So, all of this stuff that goes together, Supervisors Yee and Kim have a ballot measure to make monies available for child care of which there is a huge shortage of and all of these things go together. So how do we design a city that has affordable housing, but also has all those other things that families need? A big thing is affordability, but proximity to schools, proximity to child care, ease of access to transportation and biking, if that is how you get around. So, I'm wondering, Director, where that is going? What is the next step after defining family housing and how can we put all of those smart minds in the department to work together, across different things, to weave all of those different things together - Transportation, commercial space, child care?

Director John Rahaim:
I think the short answer is that we are continuing to work with the Supervisor and the first phase was that series of amendments to make daycare easier, if you recall. We put forward about a year ago. Commissioner Christine Johnson worked on that a little bit. And then -- sorry?

Commissioner Melgar:
The PDR, child care. Is that what you are talking about?

Director John Rahaim:
No, there were a number of provisions we put forward to kind of make it easier for child care to be approved. It no longer required a hearing and we could approve it administratively. We are then working with Supervisor Yee right now and one of the issues that you mentioned which is whether we should include where daycare as an active use on ground floors and given the discussion we're having today about retail, it is probably timely to have that discussion because there is concern about increasing number of vacancies of retail spaces. So, those are the issues we are continuing to work on. I'm happy to have Sue come back and give you an update to talk about it in more detail.

D. DEPARTMENT MATTERS

14. Director’s Announcements

Director John Rahaim:
I just wanted to give you a good news announcement today about one of our staff who received an award recently. Allison Albericci is one of our architects on staff and Allison received the 2018 AIA Young Architects award this year. This is an award given annually to individuals who have been licensed less than 10 years and who have demonstrated exceptional leadership and made contributions to the profession early in their careers. Allison has been with us about a year now. She has worked in a number of other locations as well and we're very pleased that the AIA has recognized her contributions. We wanted to publicly acknowledge and congratulate Allison on the award. Thank you.

15. Review of Past Events at the Board of Supervisors, Board of Appeals and Historic Preservation Commission

LAND USE COMMITTEE:

First at the land use committee last week was the Geary-Masonic Special Use District. As you may recall this item was continued from the previous committee meeting because substantive amendments were made to the ordinance, which were recommended by this commission. At the hearing, two people spoke in favor of the item during public comment. After public comment the committee voted to forward the item to the Full Board with a positive recommendation.
Next on the agenda was Supervisor Peskin’s ordinance that would amend the controls for Restaurant and Bar Uses in Jackson Square SUD. Commissioners, you heard this item on January 11, 2018 and voted 6-1 in support of the Ordinance. At the Land Use Committee Supervisor Peskin discussed the merits of the Ordinance as they pertain to the existing conditions in Jackson Square. Supervisor Safai asked to confirm that the Ordinance proposes to cap the number of new eating and drinking establishments in Jackson Square. Upon confirmation, both Supervisors Safai and Tang made mention that any eating and drinking restaurants looking to locate in Jackson Square but confronted with the cap are welcome in their respective districts. Supervisors voted unanimously to recommend the Ordinance to the Full Board.

Next on the agenda was the Burnett Avenue Rezoning, which came about from a lawsuit the city was involved in. This was continued to the call of the chair as the settlement has not yet been finalized. The settlement must be finalized before the Map amendment can move forward at the Board.

FULL BOARD:

- 171193 Planning Code - Inclusionary Affordable Housing Program. Sponsor: Peskin. Staff: Grob. PASSED Second Read

- 180013 Hearing - Appeal of Determination of Exemption From Environmental Review - 1526 Wallace Avenue. Staff: Special Order 3:00 PM. Items 24-27

Next on the agenda was the Categorical Exemption appeal for the proposed small-scale chicken slitter house located at 1526 Wallace Avenue. The project received a Conditional Use approval from this Commission in November of last year. The Cat Ex was appealed by the Animal Legal Defense Fund.

The appellant believed the CEQA exemption did not adequately consider environmental impacts related to air quality, wastewater, and solid waste disposal. They also claimed that the Department improperly relied on existing regulations to substantiate why the project was eligible for a Categorical Exemption. In preparation for the hearing, Planning Staff preparing a robust appeal response that provided additional information about the proposed use and its environmental impacts. Staff also coordinated with other city agencies, including SFPUC and DPH, to make sure they understood the permits that would be required for the project.

At the hearing, staff answered Supervisor Cohen’s follow-up questions, referring some of them to PUC and DPH staff, as appropriate. Staff was able to convince the Board that there was no foul play in issuing the categorical exemption and that, given the scale and type of the proposed use, there were no unusual... circumstances about the project that could lead to significant environmental impacts. By a unanimous vote of 11 to 0, the Board of Supervisors upheld the Planning Department’s categorical exemption.

- 170940 Planning Code, Zoning Map - Mission Rock Special Use District. Sponsors: Mayor; Kim. Staff: Snyder. Passed First Read

HISTORIC PRESERVATION COMMITTEE:

Tim Frye, Preservation Officer:

To share with you two items of note from yesterday’s Historic Preservation Commission hearing. Prior to the Commission hearing, the Architectural Review Committee met. In particular, they provided a design feedback to the Department of Public Works regarding the replacement of the Path of Gold Light Standards, the Landmark 200 that start at the Embarcadero and go all the way to Castro Street. They are proposed to be recast as part of the Better Market Street Realignment and the Commission did have some concerns that the recasting and change in diameter for about 236 of the poles basically from the Embarcadero to Octavia would be different than the ones from Octavia up to the Castro. So, DPW will come back to the ARC at a future hearing to provide how they've responded to the ARC comments. At the full Commission, as you’re probably aware, the Commission heard the request for certificate of appropriateness to remove the Early Days Sculpture from the Pioneer Monument located in the Civic Centre Landmark District. There were a few letters of opposition that the Department did receive via e-mail but the majority of the public comment at the public hearing was in support of the removal of the Early Days Sculpture. There was a good deal of discussion among the Commissioners with both Commissioners Johns and Pearlman raising concerns of eliminating the Early Days Sculpture without any sort of background context about even the most negative parts of U.S. History. So the Commission amended the Department’s recommend in support of removal of the sculpture with the additional conditional that either a plaque or some additional interpretation be added to the raised plinth where the Early Days Sculpture will vacate to explain why the sculpture was removed and a broader interpretation of the remaining parts of the monument. That concludes my comments unless you have any questions.
