MAYOR LEE TO NAME JASON ELLIOTT AS NEW CHIEF OF STAFF

San Francisco, CA—Mayor Edwin M. Lee today announced that Jason Elliott will be promoted to Chief of Staff. Elliott will replace Steve Kawa, who is retiring at the end of June after 25 years at the City and County of San Francisco.

Elliott has served as Deputy Chief of Staff for Mayor Lee since 2014. He has provided leadership on key policy initiatives, including efforts to raise the City’s minimum wage, launch the Department of Homelessness and Supportive Housing and create neighborhood Fix-It teams.

“Jason has worked closely with me since I became Mayor in 2011,” said Mayor Lee. “There is no person better prepared and better trained to bring continuity and steady progress toward my priorities. He is a tireless worker and an effective communicator, and I know that he will bring a determined enthusiasm and commitment to this position every day.”

Elliott served as the Mayor’s Liaison to the Board of Supervisors and Director of Government Affairs from 2011 to 2014. From 2009 to 2011, he was a Policy Advisor for Mayor Gavin Newsom.

“I’m excited about this opportunity and I look forward to addressing the many important issues facing our City today,” said Elliott. “I know that I have big shoes to fill, but I’m fortunate to be able to rely on the support of so many talented colleagues and department heads. Together, we are ready to carry out the vision of the Mayor and work to make San Francisco a better place for all.”

Kawa served under Mayors Lee, Newsom and Brown, and began his career at the City and County of San Francisco in 1991, working as a Legislative Aide to former Supervisor Tom Hsieh. Kawa helped guide San Francisco through challenging times such as the Great Recession and the aftermath of 9/11, and through historic achievements including marriage equality and universal healthcare access. He also helped oversee unprecedented investments in affordable housing and infrastructure projects.

“Steve has helped shape the policies and the values of this City for the better,” said Mayor Lee. “He has worked tirelessly on the City’s emergency disaster responses to ensure all residents are safe, led countless labor negotiations, and ensured the long-term financial stability of the City through pension reform. Steve was the calm amongst many storms. We are lucky to have had such a compassionate and brave public servant.”

“It has been a great honor to work on behalf of the City I love for so many years,” said Kawa. “I am incredibly grateful to have worked alongside so many passionate and dedicated employees and to have served under Mayors Brown, Newsom and Lee, all of whom I respect deeply. I have built important relationships and made countless friends. Above all, I am proud of our collective efforts to make this City an inclusive, fair and just place for San Franciscans.”

MAYOR LEE ANNOUNCES BROADCAST OF GOLDEN STATE WARRIORS GAME THREE OF THE NBA FINALS
AT CIVIC CENTER PLAZA

City to Host Public Viewing of Wednesday’s NBA Finals Away Game for Families & Fans

San Francisco, CA – Mayor Edwin M. Lee today, in partnership with the San Francisco Recreation and Park Department, announced that Wednesday’s Game Three of the National Basketball Association (NBA) Finals will be broadcasted live in Civic Center Plaza for families and fans to gather and cheer on the Golden State Warriors against the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Game Three of the NBA Finals will be played in Cleveland’s Quicken Loans Arena with tip off at 6:00 p.m. Pacific Time. A jumbotron screen will broadcast Game Three of the NBA Finals in front of San Francisco City Hall.

“With the support of Dub Nation, the Warriors have taken a commanding 2-0 lead at Oracle
“Arena,” said Mayor Lee. “To keep up the momentum we’re creating a Dub Nation opportunity in front of San Francisco City Hall for families and fans to cheer on our team as they head to Cleveland for Game Three. Home or away, Warrior fans will be cheering on our team all the way to the NBA Championship.”

In keeping with the event focus on families, alcohol will not be sold or permitted on Civic Center Plaza during the broadcast. Those attending the broadcast are encouraged to come early to secure a spot and take public transportation via Muni or BART to Civic Center or Van Ness stations.

“We are thrilled to host this viewing party. Like parks, the Warriors bring people together in community,” said Phil Ginsburg, General Manager of the Recreation and Park Department. “The Warriors are exemplary models for our kids – how to work hard, how to persevere, and most importantly, how to have fun.”

In a show of civic pride as the Warriors continue their run in the best-of-seven series for the Larry O’Brien Championship Trophy, the Warriors flag will continue to fly over City Hall. City Hall, Coit Tower and San Francisco International Airport will remain lit in Warriors colors for the duration of the NBA Finals.

_This is an alcohol-free event. The San Francisco Police and Recreation and Park Departments will be on hand to monitor and enforce a zero tolerance policy for alcohol and other controlled substances in Civic Center Plaza._

MAYOR LEE’S $1.2 BILLION NONPROFIT INVESTMENT ENSURES DELIVERY OF VITAL SERVICES

Announcement made as $2.7 million in real estate assistance is awarded to neighborhood-serving nonprofits

San Francisco, CA—Mayor Edwin M. Lee’s two-year budget proposal will feature a $1.2 billion investment in nonprofits, helping to ensure that these organizations continue delivering critical services to San Francisco’s most at-risk residents. That investment includes a program to help local nonprofits plan and pay for essential real estate and rental costs, as well an initiative to fund cost of doing business increases.

“Nonprofit organizations work tirelessly to provide culturally competent, neighborhood based services to our most vulnerable residents,” said Mayor Lee. “We are proud to work with our nonprofit partners on essential issues such as housing, homelessness, childcare, food security, and immigration rights. In this time of great uncertainty from the federal administration, this budget makes a bold statement that we stand as one in San Francisco around our shared values to ensure the sustainability of our social safety net.”

Nonprofit organizations act as the City’s partner to carry out essential public health, homelessness, childcare services, workforce development, domestic violence prevention, arts and culture, housing and community development programs, among many others.

“Our nonprofit partners are a critical support for San Francisco families,” said September Jarrett, Executive Director of San Francisco Office of Early Care and Education. “We partner with nonprofits of all sizes—from large organizations working citywide, to single-site organizations designed to meet unique neighborhood needs—to help families navigate the often complex process of finding high-quality affordable childcare and early care and education. We deeply value our nonprofit partners that work day in and day out to provide enriching learning environments where our city’s youngest children can flourish.”

The Mayor’s two-year budget will include a Cost of Doing Business (CODB) increase for local nonprofit organizations, which equates to $39 million or five percent over the two-year budget. This CODB funding is meant to address inflationary cost pressures that nonprofits face and to ensure their financial sustainability.

“The Mayor's budget demonstrates his strong support for the nonprofit health and human services in San Francisco,” said Steve Fields, Executive Director of Progress Foundation. “This investment provides support for the staff members of our agencies who struggle with the financial challenges of living in the City they serve. Even more importantly, this funding assures that residents of the City who rely on the safety net will continue to receive critically needed health care, mental health treatment, and social support services.”

“We appreciate the Mayor’s recognition, through these investments, of the important role our sector plays in providing critical health and human services to San Francisco’s most vulnerable residents,” said Sherilyn Adams, Executive Director of Larkin Street Youth Services and Co-Chair of the Human Services Network. “It is in partnership with the Mayor and the City that nonprofits can most effectively execute on their missions toward the common goal of addressing some of most challenging social issues that impact all San Franciscans.”

This five percent increase over two years came as the result of Nonprofit Working Group, a collaborative effort between local nonprofit organizations and city agencies. The group recommended the City fund a two-year CODB increase, along with other initiatives to improve contracting practices, enhance accountability safeguards, and support the financial sustainability of nonprofits.

Mayor Lee unveiled the nonprofit budget while announcing $2.7 million in grant awards to support permanent real estate and long term leases for nonprofit organizations in San Francisco. The grants are part of the Nonprofit Sustainability Initiative (NSI), a program designed to help keep nonprofits in San Francisco by enabling them to become owners of their space and incentivizing philanthropic investment in nonprofit space stabilization and real estate.

After a rigorous request for proposal and selection process, $2.2 million will be used to help purchase permanent locations for Portola Family Connections, San Francisco Conservation Corps, the Community Youth Center of San Francisco, and the Salvation Army - Bayview Impact Center.

The remaining $500,000 will be used to fund one-time real estate expenses for eight other nonprofit organizations. As a result of the Mayor’s investment, these nonprofit organizations will stay in San Francisco, offering up their essential services for local residents.

The awards provide key funding to nonprofit projects that will create 26,000 square feet of new, permanent nonprofit space and 36,000 square feet of leased space for childcare, employment training, legal services, arts classes, counseling and leadership development in low-income and historically under-served communities citywide.

The $2.7 million announced on Friday was part of this year’s budget. The Mayor’s proposed two-year budget will include an additional $6 million toward this important initiative.

MAYOR LEE’S PROPOSED BUDGET FOCUSES ON REeducating HARM ON OUR STREETS
WHILE INVESTING IN NEIGHBORHOODS

Two-Year Budget Plans for Uncertain Future as Federal Government Threatens Major Cuts

San Francisco, CA— Mayor Edwin M. Lee today presented his two-year balanced budget, proposing a $10 billion outline for Fiscal Year 2017-18 and a $10 billion outline for Fiscal Year 2018-19. The two-year budget focuses new investments on reducing harm on our streets and homelessness, while maintaining historic funding levels for parks, street repaving and other infrastructure projects.

The budget preserves ongoing investments in housing, transportation, education, and the arts as well neighborhoods and small businesses while constraining government growth.

“Since the Great Recession, we have enjoyed the largest period of economic growth in the City’s history. But with that economic growth comes expectations that our neighborhoods and streets offer an experience that is safe and clean,” said Mayor Lee. “The issues plaguing our streets are undeniable. As we grapple with a national opiate crisis on our City streets we need commitment, flexibility and adaptation to meet this challenge. Today we are investing new resources to address the behavioral health issues and heartbreaking evidence of addiction we witness on our streets daily.”

“Support for our most vulnerable populations, particularly funding for homeless services, housing, and affordable healthcare is more important than ever as we face serious federal funding risks, and I appreciate the Mayor and his budget team for presenting a balanced budget that reflects these goals,” said Supervisor Malia Cohen, Chair of the Budget and Finance Committee. “Achieving a balanced budget, preparing for federal uncertainty, all while ensuring critical ongoing services is an enormous effort, and I look forward to working with the my colleagues on the Board of Supervisors to strengthen and approve a City budget that reflects the needs and values of San Franciscans.”

Reducing Harm on Our Streets
The City will build on the existing services and resources, while also deploying new strategies to reduce harm on our streets. Additional outreach teams will be activated specifically aimed to help individuals with behavioral health issues. These teams will proactively intervene to keep individuals from openly using drugs on our sidewalks, and connect individuals with mental health challenges with services.

There will be an expansion of hours at the Harm Reduction Center and a new 24/7 resource center will open, giving those struggling on the streets a place to access services, medical care and respite from the streets.

The first Navigation Center for individuals experiencing mental health issues and addiction will open this year. And to help the most vulnerable people suffering from severe mental illness on our streets we will create more conservatorship beds, ending the revolving door of jail and hospital.

Addressing Homelessness
During the next fiscal year, the number of beds at Navigation Centers will increase by 150 percent, providing more opportunities to move residents off the streets and out of encampments and into safe, stable living situations. A national model, Navigation Centers provide clients with access to intensive case management, critical service connection to healthcare, entitlement benefits, and drug treatment programs. Over 70 percent of residents who stay in Navigation Centers successfully transitioned into permanent housing, safe temporary placements or reunited with family members.

The Mayor has also allocated $6 million over the next two years for the creation of a new Navigation Center and asked for the help of the Board of Supervisors to identify suitable sites within their districts.

In addition to new Navigation Centers, there are further investments in shelters, supportive housing, and permanent housing exits, and millions allocated for rental subsidies.

The budget also includes funding for family, youth, Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) and veteran homelessness programs. The Mayor will be adding more than $4 million to expand our City’s homeless childcare program, ensuring that every eligible child under the age of five receive free quality care. In addition, the proposed budget includes $2 million to add 30 new shelter beds for families experiencing homelessness.

New investments for transitional aged youth, many of whom seek refuge in San Francisco to live a life of openness and inclusion, include adding hours to drop-in centers and rental subsidies. Funds will also be added to bolster youth outreach teams, which will help move these young adults off the streets and into homes and connect them to supportive services.

The Mayor will continue to fund supportive housing units for veterans, with the ultimate goal of ending chronic veterans’ homelessness in San Francisco by the end of this year. With the help of philanthropic partners, Mayor Lee has pledged to end chronic family homelessness in San Francisco by 2019, and significantly reduce overall chronic homelessness in the city.

Maintaining Quality of Life in Neighborhoods

The Mayor’s two-year budget maintains historic levels of investment for essential city infrastructure, such as streets, roads, parks, community centers and sidewalks.

Nearly $90 million will be added for street resurfacing projects, such as pothole repair, repaving, striping and other safety measures to improve the City’s roads. During the past five years, nearly 3,900 blocks have been resurfaced in San Francisco—a strategic investment that has led to safer and smoother roads. This year’s budget continues that commitment.

The budget will include $84 million in capital projects for the Recreation and Park Department, maintaining record levels of investment in the City’s parks and open spaces. The $84 million investment in capital projects represents an 81 percent increase from 2015 levels. San Francisco recently became the first city in the country to have every resident live within a 10-minute walk of an open space, and this budget will ensure that those high standards are sustained.

Overall, the Capital Budget—which funds many crucial infrastructure improvement and maintenance projects—will amount to $530 million—a level of funding that is seven times higher than when the Mayor first took office. It will also create 4,400 jobs in San Francisco.

In addition to those long-term commitments, the budget will expand the Mayor’s popular Fix-It initiative, a pilot program started last year that focuses on quality of life concerns in our neighborhood corridors. By quadrupling the efforts of the Fix-It Team, 20 new neighborhood corridors, representing every supervisorial and police district in San Francisco, will have a focus on issues such as graffiti, overgrown trees, dirty roads, poor lighting and cracked sidewalks.

To complement the Fix-It Teams, we are increasing the street cleaning budget by $3.5 million over the next two years. We will have a renewed focus on cleaning streets plagued by tent encampments and dirty needles.

Through continued funding, the City Charter mandated police staffing levels will be met, enabling SFPD to meet community policing goals and focus on reducing neighborhood crimes.

Ensuring Financial Sustainability

The new federal administration has supported policies that are directly opposed to San Francisco values, fostering volatility and uncertainty. And the recently released draft of the federal budget calls for reductions to many of the services and programs that serve our most vulnerable populations. It has called for cuts in housing and social safety nets programs, and healthcare while making significant increases in immigration enforcement resources.

Mayor Lee’s budget expands services for those most in need and ensures we continue to have a thriving nonprofit sector, expands mental health services and medical care and seeks to keep families together by funding legal services and rapid response for our immigrant community.
The Mayor’s budget provides the vital services that residents rely upon, and have rightfully come to expect while maintaining fiscal discipline.

This budget further bolsters the City’s strong fiscal footing to hedge against instability by creating a $50 million Affordable Care Act reserve and a $10 million State and Federal Impacts reserve, demonstrating that we can both make strategic investments now and save for the future.

The City Charter requires the Mayor submit a balanced budget proposal by the first working day in June. To deliver this two-year consensus budget proposal, Mayor Lee worked with the Board of Supervisors and heard directly from community leaders and residents, and met with hundreds of residents, nonprofit organizations, City Commissioners, labor organizations, business owners, and advocates to discuss priorities and address concerns.

MAYOR LEE ON THE IMPORTANCE OF THE PARIS AGREEMENT

“Climate change is real, and it is one of our world’s greatest economic and health risks. Any decision to withdraw the United States from the Paris Agreement is not only shortsighted and dangerous, but will also further erode our nation’s global standing with the international community.

In the absence of federal leadership, San Francisco will continue to take aggressive measures on climate change. Our City is proof that strong action on climate change is good for the planet and good for business. Since 1990, we have reduced our citywide emissions by 28 percent, even while our population has grown by 19 percent and our local economy by 78 percent.

Last month, we pledged that at least 50 percent of our citywide electricity will be renewable by 2020, and 100 percent renewable no later than 2030. The move to clean energy by 2020 alone is expected to create more than 5,000 jobs in existing and new solar and wind projects.

San Francisco is committed to working with cities, regions, states, institutions and businesses both nationally and internationally in the fight against climate change. The rest of the world’s countries have signaled they are committed to the Paris Agreement and so is San Francisco.”

MAYOR LEE ON CALIFORNIA ATTORNEY GENERAL’S ACTION TO PROTECT THE AFFORDABLE CARE ACT

“I applaud the action led today by the California Attorney General to protect healthcare for millions of Americans.

The current status of the House vs. Price lawsuit destabilizes insurance markets and jeopardizes critical healthcare subsidies for residents who are already struggling to pay their bills.

California and the 15 other states who joined in this motion understand the importance of healthcare affordability. We know that quality healthcare is a right that should be available for everyone.

I am proud to see Attorney General Becerra stand up for our residents and support this important cause. I encourage other state leaders to take part in this important fight.”

MAYOR LEE ON FEDERAL FUNDING APPROVAL FOR CALTRAIN ELECTRIFICATION

“I am very pleased to see that the federal government plans to move forward with fully funding Caltrain’s electrification project.

This transformative initiative will improve public transportation for regional commuters, create jobs, spur economic growth, and reduce traffic congestion on our highways and roads.

Large infrastructure projects such as Caltrain electrification are critical to ensuring that our region grows in a sustainable manner. It has been in the planning for decades, and it is encouraging that the federal government decided to honor its repeated past commitments to the project.

I want to thank our United States Senators Dianne Feinstein and Kamala Harris, and our Congressional Representatives Anna Eshoo, Jackie Speier and Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi for their tremendous leadership on this issue and their continued advocacy for this important undertaking. I would also like to thank San Jose Mayor Sam Liccardo and other local, regional and state officials and stakeholders who have supported this project over the years.”
