BUSINESS DESCRIPTION

Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company (“Armstrong Carpet” or “ACLC”) is a family-owned flooring company that was established in 1946. ACLC first opened at 2123 Fillmore Street. The founder, Chuck Armstrong, started the business upon completion of his service in World War II. ACLC expanded and Armstrong enlisted partner Willis Zing. Later, Louis Cohen joined the partnership as the company evolved and prospered. The relocation of the business to 626 Clement Street in 1956, after a brief two-year stop at 406 Clement, created a flooring destination in the Richmond district of San Francisco.

John and Theresa Petrini became the owners of ACLC in 1969, after John finished his tenure as an installer. Steve Balestrieri began working for his father-in-law John in 1974, and took the helm of ACLC in 1991, partnering with his wife Anna Marie Balestrieri. In 1996, Liam Caldwell began working as an understudy at a California carpet king. After graduating from Humboldt State University in 2002, Liam returned to Armstrong Carpet fulltime coinciding with ACLC moving to its present resting place at 369 West Portal Avenue.

In 2017, Liam and Steve and Anna Marie entered into partnership as owners of Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum. Today, ACLC is stewarded by Liam Caldwell and Steve Balestrieri and Anna Marie Balestrieri - sons and daughter of San Francisco – who continued the tradition of licensed flooring contracting serving the San Francisco Bay Area. The partners share over 64 years of local flooring knowledge and expertise, as well as fastidious dedication to expertise in all surface flooring and window covering, and the attention to detail within the customer experience.
The business is located between 14th and 15th Avenues on the south side of West Portal Avenue in the West Portal neighborhood. It is within a NCD (West Portal Avenue Neighborhood Commercial) Zoning District and within a 26-X Height and Bulk District.

BUSINESS DESCRIPTION

New World Market is an international grocer, delicatessen, and meat market specializing in traditional Slavic and Central Asian food and beverages that was established in November 1982 by Mikhail and Nonna Sukhovitsky, a married couple from the former Soviet Union. The market provides quality grocery products and freshly made food from across Europe and the world to the community of Little Russia in the Richmond District and all of San Francisco. Products include fresh Russian pastries filled with sweet fruits and/or cottage cheese, eggplant and mushroom salads, fresh rye bread and meat dishes (such as chicken Kiev, traditional Azerbaijani kebabs, house-made borscht and many others) that have been staples of Eastern European and Central Asian cuisine since the time of the Tsars. The products sold at New World Market are meant to preserve the culinary tradition of the Russian and Eastern European communities as well as give people who may not be familiar with this cuisine an opportunity to experience a relatively obscure culinary culture.

In 2000, New World Market moved from its original location at 2051 Balboa Street to 5641 Geary Boulevard. The new space enabled the market to continue serving the community while expanding its offerings to include a wider selection of products and food. In 2015, the Sukhovitskys sold New World Market to Boris, Leon and Zina Fudym. Boris and Leon are cousins, and Leon and Zina are spouses.

The new owners have given a new face to New World Market. They renovated the space, putting in new hardwood flooring and new equipment, upgrading the kitchen appliances and repainting the interior while still maintaining the traditional look and feel of the store. The new owners started preparing and smoking fresh salami in house and have widened the variety of fresh goods and produce. Some of these new products include wines from the Caucasus region and various cheese products from countries such as Latvia and Lithuania, reputed in Eastern Europe for producing some of the best dairy products available. New World Market is one of only four Russian-speaking-owned grocery businesses in all of San Francisco.

The business is located between 20th and 21st avenues on the south side of Geary Boulevard in the Outer Richmond neighborhood. It is within a NC-3 (Neighborhood Commercial, Moderate Scale) Zoning District and within a 40-X Height and Bulk District.

BUSINESS DESCRIPTION

S & S Grocery is a small family-run grocery and convenience store in the North Beach neighborhood established by S. Louie in 1959. The market sells products of everyday use including fresh fruits and vegetables, canned foods, cereals, milk, snacks and crackers, soaps, medicines, paper towels and more. In 1975, S. Louie transferred the business to his son J. Toy and his son’s wife M. Toy, known as the Toy family. The income from the store helped them raise their children, putting them through school and college, and helped support their family. J. Toy and M. Toy worked very hard to be able to support and petition all of their family members to immigrate to the United States. As with many family-owned grocery stores, all of the children worked after school at S & S Grocery, pitching in to help out.

On October 17, 1989, the Loma Prieta Earthquake with a moment magnitude of 6.9 struck the Bay Area. The quake severely damaged the city’s freeway including the Embarcadero on/off ramp, which was a direct route into Chinatown and North Beach. The change that followed included the dismantling of the Embarcadero freeway making access to/from Chinatown and North Beach more difficult. Despite the physical changes to the environment, S & S Grocery maintained its presence serving the community and the residences on nearby Telegraph Hill.

After many years of hard work, J. Toy and M. Toy retired in 1999 and transferred the business to their niece and nephews, F. Lau, J. Lau and S. Lau, known as the Lau family. As with the Toy family, many members of the Lau family work together to keep S & S Grocery in operation, through the dot-com boom in the late 1990s and the most recent recession in the 2000s. The store continues to serve the residents of North Beach as a family-owned grocery store with multiple family members involved in the business.

The business is located between Union and Green streets on the west side of Grant Avenue in the North Beach neighborhood. It is within a NCD (North Beach Neighborhood Commercial) Zoning District and within a 40-X Height and Bulk District.

BUSINESS DESCRIPTION

The Yu family opened Yuet Lee Restaurant (“Yuet Lee”) on January 1, 1977, at 1300 Stockton Street on the same corner of Stockton Street and Broadway where it is today. It was established by husband and wife team Chi Yuet Yu and Mee Hun Lee. The restaurant name, Yuet Lee, is a combination of both their names. The Yu family ran a neighborhood restaurant in Hong Kong – also called Yuet Lee – for a number of years. When they immigrated to San Francisco, they brought the family recipes with them. Yuet Lee is famous for their Hong Kong style seafood dishes.

When Yuet Lee Restaurant first opened in San Francisco, it had a difficult time being accepted by its North Beach neighbors. They had located their restaurant on the north side of Broadway, which was the demarcation line separating Chinatown and North Beach. Everything south of Broadway was Chinatown; everything north of Broadway was North Beach. Yuet Lee Restaurant, located on the north side of Broadway, was infringing on the Italian section of North Beach. Despite the neighbors’ initial disfavor with the restaurant, the family overcame the adversity and won support of local patrons. In 1998, Yuet Lee transferred to Chi Yuet Yu and Mee Hun Lee’s three children: Jane Yu, Sam Yu and Wing Tim Yu. In 2016, following Jane’s withdrawal due to health reasons and Wing Tim’s passing, Sam took over the entire operation of Yuet Lee Restaurant.

Yuet Lee Restaurant, originally located in North Beach, is an important contributor to the Chinatown neighborhood. The distinctive green color of the building and its bright interior lighting have made the building an icon and a beacon to those natives and tourists seeking delicious seafood. According to Sam Yu, the distinctive green color has made it a landmark in Chinatown. Although the restaurant can serve only 47 people at a time in the main dining room, they serve 300-500 customers a day.

The business is located at the northeast corner of Stockton Street and Broadway on the border between North Beach and Chinatown. It is within the CCB (Chinatown Community Business) Zoning District and within a 65-N Height and Bulk District.

ARMSTRONG CARPET AND LINOLEUM COMPANY
Section 4: Written Historical Narrative

CRITERION 1

Provide a short history of the business from the date the business opened in San Francisco to the present day, including the ownership history. For businesses with multiple locations, include the history of the original location in San Francisco (including whether it was the business's founding and or headquartered location) and the opening dates and locations of all other locations.

Since 1946, Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company (“Armstrong Carpet” or “ACLC”) has built its reputation on craftsmanship, quality and customer service all while operating continuously as a family-owned business in San Francisco. The company is presently located at 369 West Portal Avenue in the West Portal neighborhood.

Almost three-quarters of a century ago in 1946, ACLC welcomed its first customers at its original 2123 Fillmore Street address. Upon completion of his service in World War II, Chuck Armstrong, the founder, returned to San Francisco and envisioned and executed a dream to bring premium floor covering installations to the Bay Area. Naturally, he named the showroom after his favorite person, and ascribed the storied moniker of “Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company” to the new corporation born 1946 in the San Francisco Bay Area.

ACLC expanded and Mr. Armstrong soon enlisted partner Willis Zing. Later, Louis Cohen joined the partnership as the company evolved and prospered. The relocation of the business to 626 Clement Street in 1956, after a brief two-year stop at 406 Clement, created a flooring destination in the Richmond district of San Francisco.

John and Theresa Petrini became the owners of ACLC in 1969, after John finished his tenure as an installer.

Steve Balestrieri began working for his father-in-law John in 1974, and took the helm of ACLC in 1991, partnering with his wife Anna Marie Balestrieri. The business stood through the quake of 1989 fortunately escaping with just the front exterior plate glass windows breaking.

In 1996, Liam Caldwell unknowingly began his fortuitous tutelage as an understudy as a California carpet king. Traveling on the 29 Muni bus or by bike during his junior year at Lincoln High School, Liam labored at the shop after school, on weekends and summers. After graduating from Humboldt State University in 2002, Liam returned to Armstrong Carpet full-time coinciding with ACLC moving to its present resting place at 369 West Portal Avenue.

In 2017, Liam and Steve and Anna Marie entered into partnership as owners of Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum.
Today, ACLC is stewarded by Liam Caldwell and Steve Balestrieri and Anna Marie Balestrieri – sons and daughter of San Francisco – who continued the proud tradition of licensed flooring contracting serving the San Francisco Bay Area. The partners share over 64 years of local flooring knowledge and expertise, as well as fastidious dedication to expertise in all surface flooring and window covering, and the attention to detail within the customer experience.

b. Describe any circumstances that required the business to cease operations in San Francisco for more than six months?

ACLC thankfully has not encountered circumstances that required the shop to cease operations in San Francisco for more than six months.

C. Is the business a family-owned business? If so, give the generational history of the business.

We are a family owned business since inception. Chuck Armstrong created the company in 1946 and collaborated with Willis Zing, and later Louis Cohen. Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Cohen sold the business to former Armstrong installer John Petrini, who partnered with his wife Theresa. John handled sales and Theresa did the bookkeeping. Their daughter Anna Marie Balestrieri and her husband Steve Balestrieri followed their footsteps and formula, mirroring the duties when they bought the business in 1991. In 2017, Liam Caldwell entered into partnership with the Balestrieris and will become the sole owner in 2019.

d. Describe the ownership history when the business ownership is not the original owner or a family-owned business.

Chuck Armstrong was a flooring installer who opened the shop and later partnered with Willis Zing and Louis Cohen. The later partners were more involved in the sales and management of the shop. John Petrini was an installer at Armstrong and purchased the business from his employers with his wife Theresa. Their daughter and son-in-law, Anna Marie and Steve Balestrieri, both worked at the shop and took ownership when their parents wished to retire. Anna Marie and Steve partnered with long time employee Liam in 2017 to continue the succession of the business. Liam’s daughters Nia and Aya Caldwell both assist their father from time to time at the store following in ACLC’s storied family legacy.

An ownership history of Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company is as follows:
- 1946 to 1954: Chuck Armstrong
- 1954 to 1958: Chuck Armstrong and Willis Zing (Partners)
- 1958 to 1969: Chuck Armstrong, Willis Zing and Louis Cohen (Partners)
- 1969 to 1991: John and Theresa Petrini
- 1991 to 2017: Anna Marie and Steve Balestrieri
- 2017 to Present: Anna Marie Balestrieri, Steve Balestrieri and Liam Caldwell (Partners)
- Pending in 2019: Liam Caldwell
e. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years, the applicant will need to provide documentation of the existence of the business prior to current ownership to verify it has been in operation for 30+ years. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation is included in this Legacy Business Registry application demonstrating the existence of the business for 30+ years.

f. Note any other special features of the business location, such as, if the property associated with the business is listed on a local, state, or federal historic resources registry.

The property has a Planning Department Historic Resource status of “B” (Properties Requiring Further Consultation and Review).

CRITERION 2

a. Describe the business's contribution to the history and/or identity of the neighborhood, community or San Francisco.

Installation expertise has always been the engine behind the success of Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company. The business owners are adept at locating and training good people and valuing the continuity of a skilled labor force. Generations of master mechanics, with residential and commercial prowess, are built at ACLC. The unfamiliar muscles of the green flooring apprentices or “carpet lumpers” soon are transformed and grown by lugging heavy materials along narrow, tight streets, steep unparkable hills and endless stairs of the notorious San Francisco topography. The intricacies of installation complications are magnified in centuries old architecture and the incongruous artisanship. Our shop is unique in having the capabilities to create these craftsmen that still spring forth from ACLC.

These great laborers soon grow to seasoned installers, forged in the terrain and historical homes and businesses of San Francisco. We produce exceptionally strong journeymen installers, adept at all types of soft and hard surface installations. They have all the brawn, but have the trained eye to produce and appreciate a fine heat welded outside corner, or the chemical expertise to specify the exact flash point of finicky mastic, and the confidence to denigrate a hacked carpet seam. These are the master senior mechanics at ACLC that have floor covered the San Francisco Bay Area since 1946. We have proudly trained and produced generations of installers, and our family tree of mechanics speak for itself. Many of our employees have moved on to be master trainers, business owners and fixtures of the flooring fabric in the Bay Area.

b. Is the business (or has been) associated with significant events in the neighborhood, the city, or the business industry?
ACLC has been at the forefront of training and industry standards for years. In 1957, the upstairs of the shop at 626 Clement Street served as the backdrop for a fledgling flooring insurance industry publication outlining the difficulties and dangers of the mastics and solvents used in installation. John Petrini and longtime installer Joe Aguilar were photographed installing VAT or vinyl asbestos tile. Regulations and plastics revolutionized the industry, and we were at the inception of training. Steve Balestrieri served on labor relation board helping to guide the flooring trade into the future.

Enclosed is a photo of our apprentice we trained, David Christie, who won first place in a national combination installer competition in Hawaii in 1992. This was back when industry supported labor training events such as this! He is standing next to John Galea Sr., the head trainer for Northern California, who also cut his installation teeth at ACLC, as did his son John Galea Jr. This photo has been displayed at ACLC since 1992.

We are proud members of the International Design Guild, a coveted and prestigious alliance of an elite guild of the top preforming flooring showrooms.

c. Has the business ever been referenced in an historical context? Such as in a business trade publication, media, or historical documents?

Our inclusion in Hardware Mutuals Insurance Company’s “Underscore” publication for the education of insurance underwriting in May-June 1957 shows our prominence at the inception of the flooring industry’s growth. Copies of that publication are included in this Legacy application.

d. Is the business associated with a significant or historical person?

ACLC has catered to the building, design and retail sector of the San Francisco Bay Area for decades. Many customers are well-known people. We have performed installations for many prominent residents such as Danielle Steele, The Getty Residence, Raymond Burr, Gary Radnich, Greg Popovich and Sharon Stone within their homes. Yet, it is our generations of Bay Area families that are our MOST significant customers.

We have fabricated and furnished custom red runners for the U.S. Military that were rolled out for the arrival of three United States Presidents when they visited the Presidio. Bill Clinton, George Bush Sr. and George Bush Jr. on separate trips during their tenure have stepped on our custom runners.

e. How does the business demonstrate its commitment to the community?

ACLC is best served by an adage of owner Steve Balestrieri: “Take care of your employees and customers and the financials will take care of itself.” Focus on maintaining generous relationships steeped in respect and honesty with your employees and customers, and that will lead to prosperity. We believe at our core that being a good employer and neighbor go hand in hand. We are committed to being good neighbors and upstanding citizens within our San Francisco community.

We are proud members of the West Portal Merchants Association and the Greater West Portal Neighborhood association. Each year we receive calls from public and private school in San Francisco, and Bay Area and we donate to the fundraisers or donate area rugs to the classrooms for our children to have a comfortable place to learn.

f. Provide a description of the community the business serves.

Armstrong serves the San Francisco Bay Area from Petaluma to San Jose and the Pacific Ocean to Oakland. We will follow a customer most anywhere in the Bay Area, and our area of coverage expands as relationships grow.

The majority of our business comes from San Francisco proper, and we service and beautify all neighborhoods in San Francisco, residential and commercial.

g. Is the business associated with a culturally significant building/structure/site/object/interior?

Armstrong Carpet’s iconic neon sign was hung on the 406 Clement Street building when the shop opened in 1954. That original sign moved to West Portal when the business relocated. It became necessary to augment the original neon sign for improved visibility, so a matching neon sign was created in 2004 and erected perpendicular to the building. The two signs are prominently visible up and down West Portal Avenue. The classic neon is a beacon on the “quiet” block of West Portal.

Armstrong Carpet is a fixture in the community it serves, and acts to beautify the homes in San Francisco and the surrounding areas. We care about our neighbors and neighborhood. We strive to be accountable, respectful partners in the community. We are a local, family owned business rooted in San Francisco. As a small business, we are able to offer a higher level of flexibility and detail to artisanship than any cookie cutter big box store that cannot begin to compete with the level of and customer service and custom installations. We give the local community members the option to shop with and support a company that boasts employees who grew up and live in the neighborhoods and are vested in the community.

CRITERION 3

a. Describe the business and the essential features that define its character.
Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company provides quality custom flooring and window coverings.

At its essence, ACLC is a professional contracting service business ingrained with laser focus dedicated to the installer and customer. We stand by our installations and perform all jobs with quality, artisanship, and excellent customer service. Our reputations is literally built on our many years of installations in the homes and businesses of generations of Bay Area people.

b. How does the business demonstrate a commitment to maintaining the historical traditions that define the business, and which of these traditions should not be changed in order to retain the businesses historical character? (e.g., business model, goods and services, craft, culinary, or art forms)

Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company is committed to quality customer flooring and window coverings installation.

Our commitment to our traditions can be easily seen throughout our employees. We are still flourishing by being able to train and maintain a skilled floor laying work force in San Francisco. Our reputation is owed to the retention of the most skilled flooring and window covering craftsmen and women in the Bay Area. We provide a safe, flexible and responsible work environment that breeds excellent installers. We adhere to industry and federal work standards and treat our customers and employees like family.

c. How has the business demonstrated a commitment to maintaining the special physical features that define the business? Describe any special exterior and interior physical characteristics of the space occupied by the business (e.g. signage, murals, architectural details, neon signs, etc.).

Armstrong Carpet and Linoleum Company is committed to maintaining the neon sign that dates back to the 1950s and is prominently displayed up and down West Portal Avenue, as well as the replica neon sign made of identical quality craftsmanship.

d. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years; the applicant will need to provide documentation that demonstrates the current owner has maintained the physical features or traditions that define the business, including craft, culinary, or art forms. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation that demonstrates the current owner has maintained the physical features or traditions that define the business is included in this Legacy Business Registry application.

1. The bureaus use the experience from a group of companies thus producing rates which are sounder than if made by each individual company.
2. By having the bureaus make the filings of rates it is not necessary for the various companies to go to the insurance departments to justify their rates or their filings.
3. There is a more uniformity when bureaus make rates, rules, forms, etc. If each company made its own rates, rules, etc., you can imagine what chaos there would be in the insurance industry, to the public and for the insurance commissioners.
And what are the disadvantages?
1. Insurance companies cannot move or make changes as rapidly as they could if they were operating on their own because they must wait for the bureau rates, rules, forms, etc.
2. The ideas and judgments of the individual company must often be changed as a result of negotiations and study by the group.

Who is the bureau and who operates it? To a certain extent we are the bureau. Let's take, for example the Mutual Insurance Rating Bureau — the bureau which furnishes the casualty company with most of its rates. The Mutual Insurance Rating Bureau was organized by a group of mutual insurance companies.
It was organized to produce adequate and reasonable rates for its members and subscribers. The MIRR, as other bureaus, has a staff of competent persons who prepares rates, rules, and forms. However, they do not prepare the rates, rules and forms on their own but only upon the direction of the insurance companies' representatives.

As a case in point, our company is represented by a bureau representative on the Automobile Rating Committee. This committee is composed of nine persons from nine mutual companies who adopt the pattern for the making of rates following a general pattern which has been set by the Actuarial Committee which is also composed of insurance company representatives. The actual preparation of the rates following the pattern set by the Actuarial and Automobile Rating Committees is then done by the bureau staff. The rules in the Automobile Manual, for example, are developed by the Automobile Rating Committee and usually after a confercence with the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters Automobile Rating Committee. Thus you will see that the actual making of the rates, rules, etc., follow basic decisions and patterns made by the insurance company representatives, subject to approval of course by the insurance commissioners.

Who then are the rating bureaus? The insurance companies are the rating bureaus subject to insurance department supervision.

Richard Kurylo
Program Manager, Legacy Business Program
June 6th, 2018

Dear Director Regina Dick-Endrizzi,

I am writing to nominate New World Market to the Legacy Business Registry. The New World Market was founded in 1982 in the Central Richmond District as a Russian and Eastern European delicatessen. Ever since its opening, the New World Market has become a staple of the local community and an integral part of the rich Eastern European history of the district. For many people the New World Market has become a home away from home, serving food that they ate as children in their home countries like Poland, Ukraine, Russia, and many other countries from the region.

New World Market is one of the only Russian and Eastern European delicatessens in San Francisco and provides a space for people of Eastern European descent to feel comfortable and to congregate. New World Market is also dedicated to providing employment opportunities to immigrants, with the majority of New World Market’s staff being immigrants themselves. New World Market’s dedication to the community, diversity, and delicious food is a perfect representation of the values of District 1 and a great addition to the San Francisco Legacy Business Registry. I thank you in advance for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Sandra Lee Fewer
San Francisco Board of Supervisors, District 1

NEW WORLD MARKET
Section 4: Written Historical Narrative

a. Provide a short history of the business from the date the business opened in San Francisco to the present day, including the ownership history. For businesses with multiple locations, include the history of the original location in San Francisco (including whether it was the business's founding and or headquartered location) and the opening dates and locations of all other locations.

New World Market opened on November 1, 1982, at 2051 Balboa Street. The original owners were Mikhail and Nonna Sukhovitsky, a married couple from the former Soviet Union looking to accomplish the American dream of success while at the same time trying to bring a piece of their home culture to the United States through cuisine and Russian and Eastern European culinary culture.

Since the beginning, New World Market has been providing quality grocery products and freshly made food from across Europe and the world to the community of Little Russia in the Richmond District and all of San Francisco. Products such as fresh Russian pastries filled with sweet fruits and/or cottage cheese remind people, we have been told, of the smells from their childhood in the Soviet Union and former Soviet countries. And the eggplant and mushroom salads, fresh rye bread and meat dishes (such as chicken Kiev, traditional Azerbaijani kebabs, house-made borscht and many others) have been staples of Eastern European and Central Asian cuisine since the time of the Tsars. The products sold at New World Market are meant to preserve the culinary tradition of the Russian and Eastern European communities as well as give people who may not be familiar with this cuisine an opportunity to experience a relatively obscure as well as delicious culinary culture.

In 2000, New World Market moved to a new location at 5641 Geary Blvd. This new space was bigger than the original location but only a few blocks away. The new location enabled the market to continue serving the community while expanding its offerings to include a wider selection of products and food.

In 2015, the Sukhovitskys sold New World Market to Boris, Leon and Zina Fudym. Boris and Leon are cousins, and Leon and Zina are spouses.

The new owners have given a new face to New World Market. They renovated the space, putting in new hardwood flooring and new equipment, upgrading the kitchen appliances and repainting the interior while still maintaining the traditional look and feel of the store. The new owners started preparing and smoking fresh salami in house and have widened the variety of fresh goods and produce, as well as upgrading the caliber of the merchandise, now including various organic products. Some of these new products include wines from the Caucasus region and various cheese products from countries such as Latvia and Lithuania, reputed in Eastern Europe for producing some of the best dairy products available. Fudym family recipes for fresh food were also added to the already large repertoire of fresh food offered at New World Market.

b. Describe any circumstances that required the business to cease operations in San Francisco for more than six months?

New World Market has not ceased operations for longer than six months.

c. Is the business a family-owned business? If so, give the generational history of the business.

Since its opening, New World Market has always been a family business. A first it was run by husband and wife team Mikhail and Nonna Sukhovitsky. Then it was sold to Boris Fudym and his cousin and cousin’s wife Leon and Zina Fudym. Many Fudym family members work at New World Market including Leon and Zina's children. The family is fully invested in the store and works hard to make it a success.

d. Describe the ownership history when the business ownership is not the original owner or a family-owned business.

Mikhail and Nonna Sukhovitsky, a married couple, ran the business from its start in 1982 until 2015, when it was bought by Boris, Leon and Zina Fudym. The new owners have turned New World Market into a family project and endeavor. An ownership history of the store is as follows:

1982 to 2015   Mikhail and Nonna Sukhovitsky
2015 to Present Boris, Leon and Zina Fudym

e. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years, the applicant will need to provide documentation of the existence of the business prior to current ownership to verify it has been in operation for 30+ years. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation showing the existence of the business prior to the current ownership is included in the Legacy application.

f. Note any other special features of the business location, such as, if the property associated with the business is listed on a local, state, or federal historic resources registry.

a. Describe the business's contribution to the history and/or identity of the neighborhood, community or San Francisco.

New World Market is a representation of San Francisco’s vibrant Russian speaking community. The market is located in the middle of “Little Russia,” an area of the city with a large concentration of Russian speaking people. The store provides San Francisco with a taste of real Russian and Slavic culture in terms of food and produce.

New World Market features imported products from Russian and Eastern Europe as well as traditional food with recipes that have been in the Fudym family for many generations. Foods available include dolma (stuffed grape leaves), smoked sausages and meat, stuffed pepper, manti, dumplings, vereniki, pelmeni, stuffed eggplants, olivie (Russian potato salad), blintzes, manti, borsch, plov (rice with lamb or beef), crepes with red caviar, vinaigrette (Russian beet salad), smoked fish, cheesecake, candies, sweets, preserves and beverages, as well as hundreds of other products imported from Eastern Europe and elsewhere in the world.

New World Market is dedicated to providing the Eastern European community with a welcoming and friendly environment and a place to congregate. The market is a staple of the Russian speaking community in San Francisco and a go-to spot to experience true Russian culture.

b. Is the business (or has been) associated with significant events in the neighborhood, the city, or the business industry?

In June 2018, New World Market hosted a complimentary Georgian Wine Tasting in which attendees had a chance to taste unique wines that were aged in Qvevris (large Clay jars buried under the ground) following the 8,000-year-old traditional Georgian method. A food pairing was provided with the tasting as well. The tasting took place at the Hermitage Banquet Hall restaurant next door to New World Market, recently opened by the Fudym family as a space for Russian and Eastern European people to be able to dine and socialize.

There are currently plans to host more tastings and culinary events of this nature such as red and black caviar tastings.

c. Has the business ever been referenced in an historical context? Such as in a business trade publication, media, or historical documents?

New World Market has been featured in the following publications:

d. Is the business associated with a significant or historical person?

No.

e. How does the business demonstrate its commitment to the community?

New World Market has catered to the San Francisco community, and more specifically the Russian-speaking community, since 1982. The business specializes in traditional European comfort food and creates an atmosphere of familiarity where old friends meet each other and talk while shopping for their groceries.

f. Provide a description of the community the business serves.

New World Market is located on Geary Blvd. between 20th and 21st avenues in the heart of Little Russia in the Richmond District. The market caters mainly to the Russian-speaking community and immigrants from the former USSR countries: Russia, Ukraine, Georgia, Kazakhstan, etc. The business serves traditional Slavic and Central Asian food, and is proud to expose the non-Russian community in and around San Francisco to the amazing cuisine of the Russian-speaking region.

g. Is the business associated with a culturally significant building/structure/site/object/interior?

The historic resource status of the building at 5625 - 5641 Geary Blvd. is categorized by the Planning Department as “Category B - Unknown / Age Eligible” with regard to the California Environmental Quality Act. The building is an attractive, brick building with multiple large windows letting passersby see into the store. The large “New World Market” sign on the face of the building is a staple of the architecture and one of the most recognizable aspects of the building. It is one of the first things to welcome costumers and the community into the store.

New World Market is one of only four Russian-speaking-owned grocery businesses in all of San Francisco. If the market were to close, the community would lose a staple of the community. New World Market's recipes are based on traditional family recipes and without the store these recipes and traditions would disappear from the community.

a. Describe the business and the essential features that define its character.

New World Market is an international grocery, delicatessen and meat shop specializing in traditional Slavic and Central Asian food and beverages. The essential features of the business are the international cuisine and the products that are familiar to Russian-speaking people and immigrants from Russia and surrounding countries, reminding people of their childhood and time in their native countries.

The essential features of the business aren't all physical. The ambiance and the feel of the store itself – the homely and welcoming atmosphere of the store and the people who are there including shoppers and employees – are the essential features of New World Market that contribute to the community that has formed around it. New World Market is a place of community characterized by its familiarity and “feel of home.”

b. How does the business demonstrate a commitment to maintaining the historical traditions that define the business, and which of these traditions should not be changed in order to retain the businesses historical character? (e.g., business model, goods and services, craft, culinary, or art forms)

New World Market is dedicated to preserving the Russian/Slavic-speaking traditions in terms of food and ambiance. The kitchen uses recipes passed on from generation to generation that have had few, if any, alterations. New World Market is dedicated to preserving the community’s traditions and values to continue to cater to the Russian-speaking population and expose the rest of San Francisco to the wonders of Russian culture and food. The owners of New World Market are extremely proud of the food, which is a staple component of the business.

c. How has the business demonstrated a commitment to maintaining the special physical features that define the business? Describe any special exterior and interior physical characteristics of the space occupied by the business (e.g. signage, murals, architectural details, neon signs, etc.).

The owners of New World Market are committed to preserving the attractive historic building that houses the business, including the brick, cornice and multiple large windows.
d. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years; the applicant will need to provide documentation that demonstrates the current owner has maintained the physical features or traditions that define the business, including craft, culinary, or art forms. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documents that demonstrate the current owner has maintained the physical features or traditions that define the business are included in the Legacy Business Registry application.
A Guide to Russian Food in San Francisco

Where to find the best borscht, pelmeni, caviar, blinis, and more by Stefanie Tuder @stefanietuder

Russian food in America is a very mixed bag. The cuisine encompasses Ukrainian, Lithuanian, Armenian, Polish, Georgian food, and more, and that's because all of those countries were considered Russia when many people from that area came to America in the 1980s and opened restaurants, which all fell under the Russian umbrella. The delicious consequence is that Russian food in America today encompasses all of those diverse cuisines, so keep that in mind when reading this map.

David Nayfeld is the chef/owner of the upcoming Che Fico, and he grew up here in the Bay Area with his Russian family. Nayfeld has spent his entire life — minus the few years he worked at the three-Michelin-starred Eleven Madison Park in NYC — eating around the city's Russian gems, and has become a definitive expert on where to go when the craving for, say, pelmeni (Russian dumplings) strikes.

The following eight places reflect Nayfeld's and Eater's picks on the best places to feast on Russian food in San Francisco (plus one in Alameda), with expert tips on what to expect, what to order, and how to succeed at dining there. On this list you'll find a mix of old-school neighborhood spots, as well as some some newer, trendier choices.

The deal: Similar to Italian delis, this one has a Russian bent, with every meat you could imagine. There's also a large selection of prepared foods, making this much more than a typical market.

David's tips: New World Market is the place to go if you want any selection of Russian grocery. Russians are known for having a sweet tooth, and there's a million different versions of candy here. Plus, it has — in my opinion — the best deli counter in the whole city. Before Whole Foods was a thing, New World Market set the model for fancy prepared foods and boutique goods. The dairy aisle is epic, with 15 or 20 choices for sour cream alone. You can get caviar, dairy, beers, smoked meats, cheeses, and there is a dessert case with no less than 15 or 20 pies in there and constantly fresh-baked pastries coming out of the oven. It's pretty magical.

My family immigrated to San Francisco in the early ’90s, leaving dreary Moldova behind for a land of gold-lined streets and rainbow flags. My parents found out too late that the flags stood for a different type of happiness than they were expecting, and the gold-lined streets were a myth. After being accosted by a homeless man who wasn’t supposed to exist in our new land of opportunity, my mother held my hand tightly, even though we lived in the safest part of the Outer Sunset.

In a fit of anxiety, my mother would often visit my brother and me at school during lunch. “Doesn’t your mother have anything to do at home?” asked my third-grade teacher after one such visit. When I could find no way to describe why my mother wouldn’t stop embarrassing me during breaks, my teacher began making suggestions. “She could consider ironing or watching television. We have very good programs in the daytime.”

My teacher had no idea that my parents couldn’t watch daytime television because they didn’t understand the language. In fact, the only television my parents watched was a Russian program called Russart that aired on Mondays at 9 p.m. on channel 27. Because the show was on the SF public access channel, my parents had to immediately turn the TV off after the credits rolled, lest my brother and I be assaulted by the naked bodies or swearing that would inevitably be on the air after 11 p.m.

On Saturdays, my parents would take us to the Russian video store, a tiny nameless room on Balboa Street, where we’d pick bootleg videos out of catalogs, and my parents would spend what seemed like hours discussing their new American life with Tatiana, the store manager. Tatiana had been in America three years longer than we had and knew the places to go to, the doctors to avoid, and the funeral homes that would try to upsell you because they knew you had just immigrated. When my parents got tired of Tatiana’s chatter, they started renting their videos from the Russian supermarkets on Geary in the Outer Richmond. At the markets you could rent the newest releases and buy dried meats.

My parents refused to go to the Russian market closest to our house in the Sunset. The market had once sold my mother a stale cake and refused her a refund. She threw the cake on the ground and wrenched my brother and me out of the store, promising never again to darken its doors, yelling that she hoped the store would go out of business and wishing she had the gumption to throw it not just on the ground but in the owner’s face. Several years later, when the store closed, my mother was vindicated. “I told them to treat customers better,” she told a friend on the phone in Russian. “This is what happens when you don’t put any effort into customer service!”

We had options, however. The Sunset and Richmond are home to many Russians, so if one purveyor of piroshki did you wrong, there was always another to take its place. Quality Market, Europa Express (now both closed), and New World Market were all viable alternatives where my family could comfortably shop without fear of stale or moldy pastries. And if the products were unsatisfactory, my mother would have no problem raising a fuss over 50 cents worth of blini.

My childhood was filled with such petty arguments, some that my mother won and many that she lost. Her quick temper and my father’s tendency to make offensive jokes made it difficult for our family to keep friends, but there was a never-ending supply of Russian families in San Francisco, with children I was allowed to play with (none of whom I keep in touch with now because our parents’ friendship was our only connector). My parents refused to let me have American friends because the thought of being judged by these children (and their parents) scared them. But one day my mother actually let me invite friends from school to my birthday party. I spent hours making the invitations, which like the Valentine’s cards I also made (we didn’t know you could buy them in a store!), were hideous. They were folded over scraps of lined paper that read “YOUR INVITED” on the front and “MARK IS HAVING PARTY” on the inside. For some inexplicable reason, I had also drawn either a tree or a sunflower baring fangs on each card.

On the day I was to pass the invitations out at school, my mother unceremoniously canceled my party.

“No party next week!” my mother yelled at me in her heavily accented English as I was preparing for school. “You bad and don’t deserve party. No birthday!” The reason wasn’t clear; it could have been any number of things. A week before I told her the F on my progress report stood for Friday (“My teacher just wanted to remind you,” I had said). And a few days before that I’d tried to make a cake by microwaving Fruit Loops, setting off every smoke alarm in the building.
It was only years later that I learned my mother had changed her mind about the party because she was worried about Americans in her house. We had been in the country only three years then and my mother wasn’t yet the sophisticated woman who shops only at the best outlet stores. In 1993 she wore leopard-print dresses, dyed her hair a platinum blonde, and was terrified of being judged. Our furniture was used, we couldn’t afford a bounce house, and she had no idea what to serve the American children or how to make small talk with their parents. The parents, she had told me when I broached the subject of the party, would have to pick up their children outside. “This,” she said, “is rule.” And now the rule was a moot point, because there was to be no party. The Saturday of my birthday would be like any other.

The day before my cancelled party, my mother told me that we could still celebrate. She would buy salads, piroshki, and cake from a Russian store that just opened on Clement. “You can’t invite people the day before,” I muttered. “And I don’t know anyone’s phone numbers.”

“A day before is perfect time to invite,” my mother said. “All your real friends will come.” And with that she sat down and called all of her friends, inviting them and their children for a party that began at 3 p.m. and ended—unlike American parties—whenever we wanted it to. “Who tells you when to leave?” My mother scoffed at the idea of an end time. “Never do that. Is impolite and everyone talk about bad party and never visit again.”

The next day I blew out my candles to a heavily accented chorus of “Happy Birthday,” resigned to the fact that for at least another year I would be the odd kid in class with the heavy accent and the smelly lunches. On Monday, no one would talk about my bounce house or ask me to come over to play Nintendo. But to my parents, this party was perfect. We had enjoyed pizza and Russian cake, keeping the balance between our old and new lives intact.

Dear Director Dick-Endrizzi,

It is my honor and privilege to nominate S&S Grocery for inclusion on the Legacy Business Registry. S&S Grocery is a local, neighborhood grocery store situated on an historic stretch of Grant Avenue in San Francisco’s North Beach, serving the communities around Telegraph Hill and Washington Square Park. Its awning and historic sign add welcome old-world flare to a corridor not lacking for any. Family-owned and operated for well over 30 years, S & S Grocery has endeared itself to the local community and is heralded by many as the ideal neighborhood corner store.

Along a corridor with many neighborhood and community treasures, S&S Grocery is a perfect fit. In a neighborhood that has recently witnessed the closure and conversion of prized community-serving corner stores, it is even more critical that establishments like S&S Grocery continue to thrive. I hope for its continued success, and hereby recommend it for inclusion on the Legacy Business Registry.

Sincerely,

Aaron Peskin

S & S GROCERY

a. Provide a short history of the business from the date the business opened in San Francisco to the present day, including the ownership history. For businesses with multiple locations, include the history of the original location in San Francisco (including whether it was the business's founding and or headquartered location) and the opening dates and locations of all other locations.

S & S Grocery, located at 1461 Grant Avenue, was established by S. Louie in 1959. The market sells products of everyday use including fresh fruits and vegetables, canned foods, cereals, milk, snacks and crackers, soaps, medicines, paper towels and more. S & S Grocery is not just a store but an integral part of the neighborhood which makes up the community of North Beach.

For over 59 years, S & S Grocery has been operating in the Italian North Beach district close to Chinatown. During the years S & S Grocery has been in operation, it has seen many changes throughout the city, but the store has continued to maintain its original identity as a family grocery store.

In 1975, S. Louie transferred the business to his son J. Toy and his son’s wife M. Toy, known as the Toy family. The Toy family operated the business from early in the morning until midnight on Sunday to Thursday and until 2:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday. The income from the store helped them raise their children, putting them through school and college, and helped support their family. J. Toy and M. Toy worked very hard to be able to support and petition all of their family members to immigrate to United States. As with many family-owned grocery stores, all of the children worked after school at S & S Grocery, pitching in to help out. Even now, some of the neighbors who are in their golden years still remember the Toy family working together at S & S Grocery.

In 1975s, the city experienced a development boom referred to as “Manhattanization” that saw the development of skyscrapers. During this time, high-rise condominiums were constructed in residential neighborhoods, which experienced much growth. Housing and neighborhoods changed, but S & S Grocery continued to strive as a local neighborhood grocery store.

On October 17, 1989, the Loma Prieta Earthquake with a moment magnitude of 6.9 struck the Bay Area. The quake severely damaged the city’s freeway including the Embarcadero on/off ramp, which was a direct route into Chinatown and North Beach. The change that followed included the dismantling of the Embarcadero freeway making access to/from Chinatown and North Beach more difficult. Despite the physical changes to the environment, S & S Grocery maintained its presence serving the community and the residences on nearby Telegraph Hill.
After many years of hard work, J. Toy and M. Toy retired in 1999 and transferred the business to their niece and nephews, F. Lau, J. Lau and S. Lau, known as the Lau family. As with the Toy family, many members of the Lau family work together to keep S & S Grocery in operation. They are committed to providing a vital service to the neighborhood and work long hours every day from morning till night. Although a few of the family members have different primary jobs working elsewhere, they are also dedicated to S & S Grocery by working at the store at nights, weekends and holidays.

During the dot-com boom in the late 1990s, large numbers of entrepreneurs and computer professionals moved into the city. The poorer neighborhoods started becoming gentrified. The change that followed resulted in increased rents forcing people, families and businesses to leave the city. With the crash of the dot-com era, the once crowded offices had become a virtual wasteland. S & S Grocery struggled during the dot-com ups and downs, but survived.

S & S Grocery also survived the Great Recession from the late 2000s to the early 2010s. After the recession ended, new internet and software start-up companies began moving into the city, attracting new residents. The tech industry also expanded north from Silicon Valley to San Francisco, lowering vacancy rates and attracting even more residents. Property values increased, and rapidly rising rents started causing problems for San Francisco’s many small businesses. That destructive pattern has continued unabated through today. In this challenging environment, S & S Grocery has been struggling much more than it had in the past. The store continues to serve the residents of North Beach as a family-owned grocery store with multiple family members involved in the business. But the financial burden demanded from the landlord who is continually increasing the rent may break the business. The situation is dire.

The number of family-owned businesses in San Francisco are dwindling. The Laus have continued the family tradition of operating S & S Grocery in its current location for 60 years, but support is desperately needed to help maintain small businesses such as S & S Grocery so that it can continue to maintain its legacy in the city and service to the North Beach community.

b. Describe any circumstances that required the business to cease operations in San Francisco for more than six months?

S & S Grocery has not ceased operations in San Francisco since it opened in 1959.

c. Is the business a family-owned business? If so, give the generational history of the business.

S & S Grocery is a family-owned business. It was originally owned by the Toy family in 1959, transferring from the original owner to his son and daughter-in-law in 1975. It then transferred to the Lau family, who were their niece and nephews. An ownership history of the business is as follows:
1959 to 1975: S. Louie
1975 to 1999: J. Toy and M. Toy
1999 to Present: F. Lau, J. Lau and S. Lau

d. Describe the ownership history when the business ownership is not the original owner or a family-owned business.

Not applicable.

e. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years, the applicant will need to provide documentation of the existence of the business prior to current ownership to verify it has been in operation for 30+ years. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation demonstrating the existence of S & S Grocery as a grocery store for 30+ is provided in this Legacy Business Registry application.

f. Note any other special features of the business location, such as, if the property associated with the business is listed on a local, state, or federal historic resources registry.

The historic resource status of the building at 1461 Grant Avenue is listed by the Planning Department as Category A (Historic Resource Present) with regard to the California Environmental Quality Act. It appears to be eligible for listing in the California Register or the National Register as a contributor to the Upper Grant Avenue Historic District.

CRITERION 2

a. Describe the business's contribution to the history and/or identity of the neighborhood, community or San Francisco.

In addition to just trying to maintain the identity as a store serving the community, the store also integrates well into the neighborhood. Thus, the City should continue in kind to help keep that light on for S & S Grocery.

b. Is the business (or has been) associated with significant events in the neighborhood, the city, or the business industry?

The business is not associated with significant events in the neighborhood, city or business industry.

c. Has the business ever been referenced in an historical context? Such as in a business trade publication, media, or historical documents?
Although not specifically referenced in any historical context, the storefront of S & S Grocery itself was included in scenes from the movie “The Pursuit of Happyness” and recently the movie “Venom.”

d. Is the business associated with a significant or historical person?

No.

e. How does the business demonstrate its commitment to the community?

The business demonstrates its commitment to the community in a number of ways. S & S Grocery has maintained a friendly atmosphere for everyone to shop. It helps customers who have physical challenges by making deliveries. The business owners sometimes help by keeping packages for neighbors when they have to step out. They even help out neighbors by keeping a secondary key for emergencies. The store also provides good street lighting at night, which contributes to safety on the street.

f. Provide a description of the community the business serves.

S & S Grocery has always been a grocery store that serves the residents and businesses in North Beach, Chinatown, Telegraph Hill and the Italian district. The patronage coming to the store include tourists, elderly, kids, musicians, writers, artists, lawyers, doctors, nurses, etc.

g. Is the business associated with a culturally significant building/structure/site/object/interior?

S & S Grocery features a psychedelic 7-Up sign. It’s an image from 1969-1973 created by John Alcom for The Seven Up Company as a part of the famous UnCola ad campaign. The sign is a collector’s item, and tourists regularly take pictures of it. Many people comment on its beauty.

If S & S Grocery were to close, it would add to the current vacancy crisis in the North Beach, which has a vacancy rate of 10.25 percent. One contributing factor to the high vacancy rate is landlords leaving their store fronts unoccupied in hopes for higher rent. Some spaces have been vacant for over three years. Another reason is that more people prefer to shop online for convenience reasons. With fewer and fewer brick-and-mortar retailers, the vacancy trend will only worsen because people will do even more online shopping. The North Beach commercial district should be providing an environment to allow local businesses to thrive so that it can support locals and visitors. There should be a continual push to make the area vibrant and lively so it can grow the community instead of abandoning it.

CRITERION 3

a. Describe the business and the essential features that define its character.

S & S Grocery sells products of everyday use including fresh vegetables and fruits, canned foods, chips, cereals, milk, crackers, soaps, medicines, paper towels, etc. S & S Grocery has remained a family grocery store that has been operated by only family members since it was first opened. The store is managed now by a third generation of Toy-Lau family members.

Although a general grocery store is not as unique in a sense like a historical building or a painting from a famous painter, the tradition that the store brings over generations is the meaning of what is the “American Dream.” Everyone has an equal opportunity to achieve success through hard work, determination and initiative. “Everyone” means anyone willing to work hard to make their dream a reality. It could be you, me or someone just next to you. The owners of S & S Grocery came to the United States from China with few belongings. They did not speak or write English and were not familiar with American culture. Through hard work and determination, they learned the language and customs, and the principles of American businesses. The parents of the Lau family had to learn the English language, how to operate a credit card machine, how to use a cash register, how to work the lottery machine and understanding delivery systems. It was quite an accomplishment. Even now the father of the Lau’s family continues to help stock the shelves, price inventories and help customers. As old as the parents are, they have not flinched on learning but rather they embrace the opportunity to learn. The “American Dream” is more than just a phrase, it’s a reality achieved by determination and hard work, and it’s an essential feature that defines the character of S & S Grocery.

b. How does the business demonstrate a commitment to maintaining the historical traditions that define the business, and which of these traditions should not be changed in order to retain the businesses historical character? (e.g., business model, goods and services, craft, culinary, or art forms)
S & S Grocery is committed to maintaining its historical tradition as a grocery store.

c. How has the business demonstrated a commitment to maintaining the special physical features that define the business? Describe any special exterior and interior physical characteristics of the space occupied by the business (e.g. signage, murals, architectural details, neon signs, etc.).

S & S Grocery is committed to maintaining the historic 7-Up sign from the 1969-1973 ad campaign.

d. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years; the applicant will need to provide documentation that demonstrates the current owner has maintained the physical features or traditions that define the business, including craft, culinary, or art forms. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation is provided in this Legacy Business Registry application that shows the business has been a grocery store for 30+ years.

A great neighborhood market. There are actually 2 on this block. The one down the street (Grant & Green Market), is essentially the store for wine, beer, liquor, & cigarettes; whereas S&S is the store for groceries.

They usually have all of the flavors, even strawberry & pumpkin. It's the ice cream bars. And they carry both soy & almond milk, so you don't have to make a special trip to The Nature Stop just for that. There's also a surprising number of options for frozen dinners. My old roommate loved the Stouffer's lasagna...or basically anything Stouffer's for that matter. She had me hooked for awhile...

Remember being able to eat whatever you want without any physical ramifications? Sigh.

But now the best part...they always have hard boiled eggs available at the counter. Everyday. One egg will set you back a mere 65 cents. That's just a little bit more than the extra that I'm charged to make my latte w soy milk. And it's actually less than what I'm charged to make my latte w almond milk. A nice, healthy shot of protein for practically pennies?! Yes, please!

The same family has owned & run this place since the 90's. Love.

5 stars.

Great place to get some last minute items before settling in for the evening. No need to head across town to sought one item. It's just a fabulous neighborhood shop that is there when you need them. It's hassle free and service is always friendly. Short a nickel? No problem just pay back next time. They trust customer will do the right thing next time and you should be grateful to have a shop like this in your neighborhood.

Ciao Richard,

I am writing to inform you that our NB Business Association Board has unanimously voted to support the legacy business application of S&S Grocery to your office for consideration and approval.

S&S Grocery, located at 1461 Upper Grant Ave., has been a vital small business fixture in our North Beach Commercial District since 1959. Spanning 60 years as a multi-generational family owned and operated business, S&S has diligently served the residents of our Telegraph Hill and general North Beach neighborhood being open early in the mornings to very late at night up to 2 AM several nights a week. The services it offers go beyond just the goods and products its sells as, being open the late hours it operates, it is often, with its well-lit interior and street exterior, a late night refuge security oasis in the 1400 Block of Grant Ave.

We strongly urge that the Office of Small Business process and expedite the application of S&S Grocery as we, NBBA, are aware that they are facing a rent increase which will force them to close their doors if they can not achieve LB status soon,

Thank You for your immediate attention to this matter,

It was 1967, and people weren’t drinking Seven-Up. Well, a few were: consumers mostly thought of the bubbly beverage as a mixer or a tonic to calm an upset stomach. But executives at the St. Louis-based Seven-Up Company were anxious to tap into a wider market. The company wanted to rebrand its product as a common soft-drink like the more well-known cola beverages, Pepsi or Coca-Cola. It enlisted a marketing team from the Chicago office of the J. Walter Thompson ad agency to help them. Out of this collaboration came one of the most famous advertising campaigns of the 20th century.

The late 1960s were a difficult time in America. The Vietnam War and the fight for civil rights divided the country. Disillusioned young people were building a robust oppositional counterculture that rejected war, racial segregation, and violence. The summer of 1967 became known as the “Summer of Love,” a period when hippies gathered in San Francisco and cities around the country in the hopes of igniting “a renaissance of compassion, awareness, and love, and the revelation of unity for all mankind.”

Seizing on this oppositional energy, the JWT team designed a campaign that framed 7-Up as the ultimate oppositional drink: the “Uncola.” Rather than trying to play up the similarities the soda shared with its competitors, the new ads focused on its differences. In the company newsletter, the team explained “Seven-Up advertising tells people that, of the three top-selling soft drink brands, 7-Up, the Uncola, is the only one with distinctly different qualities.”
The “Uncola” struck a chord with the younger generation as the first ads appeared in 1968. They focused on puns based around “un” part of the new slogan. By portraying Coke and Pepsi as “the Establishment,” JWT effectively situated 7-Up as an alternative brand for alternative people.

The following year JWT created a contest inviting artists to submit wildly imaginative designs for 7-Up ads. The submissions were presented to the client, who chose the final images. The winner received a $2000 reward and the opportunity to work with JWT to make final versions. From this contest, JWT and the Seven-Up company built a campaign of colorful road-side billboards with psychedelic graphics. Art by young graphic designers including Pat Dypold, Ed Georges, and Milton Glaser dotted highways across the country in 1969.

A 1973 article from Southern Advertising described the success of the billboard campaign: “To zero in on the college and younger age groups, [Seven-Up executive] Roesch has developed a different approach to the use of the outdoor medium. The agency’s media department uses outdoor as a means of zeroing in on a specific target . . . instead of as a mass media that doesn’t discriminate. The boards are located accordingly, and the art used is slated to the specific likes of the age groups. The result has been demand for Seven-Up posters to be used as room decorations, party decorations, all without any promotion by the company.”
The campaign complemented its print ads and billboards with television spots. The most memorable ads from this campaign featured Trinidadian dancer and actor Geoffrey Holder explaining the difference between ugly, dry, kola nuts and the tangy, juicy lemon and limes that flavor 7-Up. The ad broke racial barriers within the Seven-Up Company, which until then had never used black actors in its television ads.

The Uncola campaign continued into the 1970s. As times changed, the campaign tried to stay in dialog with oppositional culture by incorporating new visual mediums such as grafitti. JWT argued that “In 1968, the rebellious approach of youth was a workable parallel for the rebellious approach of Seven-Up. Today, in the Seventies, the attack remains viable.” However, 7-Up’s hard-won market share declined over the course of the decade, losing ground to the growing popularity of another lemon-lime soda, Sprite.
Perhaps the soda became a victim of its own success. The Uncola campaign had so effectively linked to the youth of the 1960s that by the 1990s, it was considered “what old people drink,” in the words of one financial analyst, “and that’s not what you want in a soft drink.” In 1998, the company finally dropped the Uncola slogan and reinvented its formula. Since then the company has since tried several different campaigns to redefine its identity without success. Regardless, the Uncola campaign will remain a mainstay of the consumer culture of 20th century America and a sign of the times in which it was created.
From Uncool to Uncola – The Fabulous Psychedelic 7-Up Ads 1969-1973

By Rob Baker on December 11, 2014

‘Un & Un is Too’ by Kim Whitesides in 1969
No one really knows where the name 7-Up really comes from although we do know that it was invented in 1929 by Charles Leiper Grigg. In 1920 Grigg had already invented an orange carbonated drink called Howdy but it had never been as successful as he hoped mostly due to popular and dominating market leader Orange Crush. So Grigg searched around for a different kind of soda one without an obvious rival and after two years of experimenting came up with a lemon-lime flavoured drink. Despite being given the rather long-winded name of Bib-Label Lithiated Lemon-Lime soda the soda started selling well.

The “Bib-Label” part of the moniker referred to the paper labels on the bottle, while the “Lithiated” bit, referred to the Lithium Citrate that Grigg hoped would make the drink seem more healthy. Lithium affects the flow of sodium through nerve and muscle cells in the body and is used today to treat the manic episodes of manic depression.

Grigg sensibly abandoned the original name of his popular soft drink and after a few pared it down to 7 UP. It was never completely clear what the name referred to but despite the company’s secrecy over the matter there isn’t a good reason to think that it’s not named after the drink’s seven ingredients. An original tagline went: “Seven natural flavors blended into a savory, flavory drink with a real wallop.” One of those ingredients, of course, was lithium and that might have been the ‘Up’ bit in the name. The US Government banned lithium’s use in foodstuffs in 1948 and, presumably with a licence to delay, 7 Up stopped including lithium citrate in its recipe two years later. No one seemed to notice the lack of the mood-stabilising ingredient and by now 7UP was the third best-selling soft drink in the world.

"fresh up" with Seven-Up!

THE ALL-FAMILY DRINK!

Berry time, merry time! Thirst time, too! What a time for 7-Up! When you are really thirsty, sip a chilled bottle of 7-Up and you'll know what "fresh up" means. Seven-Up is so pure, so good, so wholesome that folks of all ages can enjoy it. "Fresh Up" with 7-Up often!

You like it… it likes you!

BUY 7-Up BY THE CASE FOR FAMILY AND GUESTS!

7UP ads were very family friendly in the 1950s, this ad from 1952.
Ad from 1963. 7-Up’s demographic was becoming older in the sixties. The company aimed ads to teenagers but to no avail.
Almost twenty years after the mood-altering drug was removed from the ingredient list the Seven-Up Company introduced the slightly counter-culture influenced UNCOLA advertising campaign. Possibly because the drink was considered by youngsters as distinctly uncool and a drink imbibed mostly by the older generation (despite the desperate attempt by 7-Up to use teenagers in their early sixties ads). 7UP’s tagline had long been: “You Like It; It Likes You”, and many presumed because it was less gassy or stomach-upsetting than the cola drinks.

The UNCOLA campaign changed everything and the ads seemed to say: ‘This is a drink that is definitely not Cola and we are different and we are proud of the difference’. Within a few months the ads sent 7UP sales rocketing.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

We the undersigned neighbors and merchants of North Beach, Telegraph Hill and Chinatown, strongly urge the Office of Small Business of San Francisco to expedite the petition of S&S Grocery to become a Legacy Business so that negotiations regarding their doubled rent can begin on their behalf as soon as possible. The loss of S&S Grocery, located on Grant Ave. between Union and Green, would be immeasurable to the local residents. It is the only TRUE GROCERY store left for blocks around which still has reasonable prices thus conveniently serving the elderly, the informed as well as the general population well into the late night.

1 Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett Place

Dear Director Dick-Endrizzi,

It is my honor and privilege to nominate Yuet Lee Restaurant for inclusion on the Legacy Business Registry.

Yuet Lee restaurant is an establishment that has existed for over 37 years. Many residents of Chinatown and North Beach remember frequenting Yuet Lee for late night meals such as there famous salt-and-pepper squid. Yuet Lee Restaurant is and was famous as a destination for late night workers, bartenders and the many celebrities that its owner, Sam Yu, has taken photos with over the years.

The family-run Yuet Lee restaurant continues to serve authentic Chinese food and remains true to its original roots in an area that has changed dramatically.

Sincerely,

a. Provide a short history of the business from the date the business opened in San Francisco to the present day, including the ownership history. For businesses with multiple locations, include the history of the original location in San Francisco (including whether it was the business's founding and or headquartered location) and the opening dates and locations of all other locations.

The Yu family opened Yuet Lee Restaurant (“Yuet Lee”) on January 1, 1977, at 1300 Stockton Street on the same corner of Stockton Street and Broadway where it is today. It was established by husband and wife team Chi Yuet Yu and Mee Hun Lee. The restaurant name, Yuet Lee, is a combination of both their names. Yuet Lee Restaurant was established as a sole proprietorship with Chi Yuet Yu listed as the owner.

The Yu family ran a neighborhood restaurant in Hong Kong – also called Yuet Lee – for a number of years. When they immigrated to San Francisco, they brought the family recipes with them. Yuet Lee is famous for their Hong Kong style seafood dishes.

The fresh shrimp are steamed for half a minute, just until they turn pink. They are served unadorned in their shells on a platter with a little bowl of soy sauce and fresh chilis, a condiment that accompanies many of the dishes. The preparation is of the simplest nature. No sauce or oils are used. The natural sweetness and juicy, tender texture of the fresh shrimp is what you taste. Or sometimes the whole shrimp are quickly stir-fried with hot red chilis, ginger and garlic. Either way they are superb.

The lobster and crab also get the briefest of cooking in the wok. It is cut into pieces, shell and all, and is sauced with one of the most delicate black bean preparations you can taste. The presentation on a large platter looks like an illustration for a Chinese cookbook, the red lobster pieces garnished by strips of black mushroom, green scallion and coriander dotted with shiny black beans. The lobster, perfumed by the vegetables in a sauce thickened only by the lobster’s tomalley and enriched by minced pork, remains the undisputed star of this accomplished dish.

The clams are the best you could ever eat in any style of preparation. They are juicy and tender and made all the more wonderfully by a succulent, spicy black bean sauce that includes coriander, hot red peppers and green onions.

When Yuet Lee Restaurant first opened in San Francisco, it had a difficult time being accepted by its North Beach neighbors. They had located their restaurant on the north side of Broadway, which was the demarcation line separating Chinatown and North Beach. Everything south of Broadway was Chinatown; everything north of Broadway was North Beach. Yuet Lee Restaurant, located on the north side of Broadway, was infringing on the Italian section of North Beach. Despite the neighbors' initial disfavor with the restaurant, the family overcame the adversity and won the hearts and stomachs of patrons from around the Bay Area and beyond. Their food was too good to deny, and eventually the neighbors acquiesced and let them be. After all, their good food brought more people to the area and helped the overall economy of that section of North Beach. Nowadays, there is no clear demarcation of Chinatown and North Beach.

In 1998, Yuet Lee transferred to Chi Yuet Yu and Mee Hun Lee’s three children: Jane Yu, Sam Yu and Wing Tim Yu. In 2016, following Jane’s withdrawal due to health reasons and Wing Tim’s passing, Sam took over the entire operation of Yuet Lee Restaurant.

b. Describe any circumstances that required the business to cease operations in San Francisco for more than six months?

The restaurant has never ceased operations since its opening in January 1977.

c. Is the business a family-owned business? If so, give the generational history of the business.

Yuet Lee is a family-owned business that has been run by the Yu family for two generations. Husband Chi Yuet Yu and wife Mee Hun Lee were in the restaurant business in their native Hong Kong. When they arrived in the United States, they decided to bring authentic Cantonese cuisine to San Francisco where there were many Cantonese Chinese people.

When Yuet Lee was established by Chi Yuet Yu in January, 1977, it was a sole proprietorship under the ownership of Chi Yuet Yu. Regardless, the entire Yu family have all have worked in the restaurant: husband Chi Yuet Yu, wife Mee Hun Lee, daughter Jane Yu, oldest son Sam Yu and youngest son Wing Tim Yu. In 1998, Chi Yuet transferred the business to his three children. Following Jane’s withdrawal due to health reasons and Wing Tim’s passing, Sam took over the entire operation of Yuet Lee Restaurant in 2016.

d. Describe the ownership history when the business ownership is not the original owner or a family-owned business.

The ownership history of Yuet Lee Restaurant is as follows:

1977 to 1998: Chi Yuet Yu
1998 to 2016: Jane Yu, Sam Yu, Wing Tim Yu
2016 to Present: Sam Yu

e. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years, the applicant will need to provide documentation of the existence of the business prior to current ownership to verify it has been in operation for 30+ years. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation of the existence of Yuet Lee Restaurant for 30+ years is included in this Legacy Business Registry application.

f. Note any other special features of the business location, such as, if the property associated with the business is listed on a local, state, or federal historic resources registry.

The historic resource status of the building at 1300 Stockton Street is classified by the Planning Department as Category A, “Historic Resource Present,” with regard to the California Environmental Quality Act. Constructed in 1906, the building appears to be eligible for listing on the California Register or the National Register.

CRITERION 2

a. Describe the business's contribution to the history and/or identity of the neighborhood, community or San Francisco.

Yuet Lee Restaurant, originally located in North Beach, is an important contributor to the Chinatown neighborhood. The distinctive green color of the building and its bright interior lighting have made the building an icon and a beacon to those natives and tourists seeking incredibly delicious seafood. According to Sam Yu, the distinctive green color has made it a landmark in Chinatown. All you have to say is, "Where's that crazy green building?" and anyone who knows Chinatown can tell you where it is. Sam's father originally painted the building that color to attract attention and awareness for the restaurant, and it worked.

The restaurant is considered an icon in Chinatown and on any given day you will see tourists as well as Chinese diners enjoying the delicious authentic Cantonese seafood. Over the years, thousands of family holiday celebration banquets, especially around Chinese New Year have been held there.

The restaurant, although not fancy, lets the food speak for itself. The restaurant is well-known for its lobster, crab, calamari, salt & pepper squid, clams with black bean sauce and traditional Cantonese chow fun dishes and is highly sought after as a destination to visiting tourists. They may laugh at the odd green color of the restaurant's exterior and overly bright interior lighting, but once they taste the food they know it was worth the trek to this special corner in Chinatown.

Although the restaurant can serve only 47 people at a time in the main dining room, they serve 300-500 customers a day. That's quite an achievement for such a small restaurant. The restaurant is also one of the few that is open until 1:00 a.m. every night.
Many of their employees have been with Yuet Lee Restaurant for a very long time because they are made to feel as though they are part of the family. Three employees had worked for Yuet Lee for over 40 years, and they just retired recently. Among current employees, two of them have been working for over 20 years. Sam’s father started the restaurant in 1977 and eventually brought over other members of their family from Hong Kong to work in the restaurant.

b. Is the business (or has been) associated with significant events in the neighborhood, the city, or the business industry?

The restaurant has not be associated with any significant events associated with the city or the restaurant industry but Sam is an advocate who always takes a proactive role by voicing out issues that impact the business community or Chinatown as a whole.

c. Has the business ever been referenced in an historical context? Such as in a business trade publication, media, or historical documents?

There have been many articles and reviews written about the restaurant that have appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle (June 2018), AAA Via Magazine (Feb. 2013), SF Weekly, San Francisco Magazine (Nov. 2005), California Magazine (Feb. 1982), Continental Magazine, and a book titled, "Restaurants of San Francisco - The Definitive Guide to the Bay Area's Best" by former SF Chronicle Restaurant Critic, Patricia Unterman and Stan Sesser. Recently, the restaurant owner was interviewed by reporter Angelina Wong and featured on KTSF Channel 26 TV.

d. Is the business associated with a significant or historical person?

Many celebrities have enjoyed meals at Yuet Lee Restaurant, including actor and Hong Kong and Hollywood Kung Fu Master Jacky Chan, Emmy Award-winning radio and TV personality Liam Mayclem, Travel Channel host Samantha Brown, actor Mikey Roe, as well as celebrity chefs Guy Fieri, Emeril Lagasse and Adam Gertler.

e. How does the business demonstrate its commitment to the community?

The owner, Sam Yu, has been a long-time member of Yee Fung Toy Family Association. The purpose of the organization is to make friendly contacts among clansmen, work for their well-being by pooling wisdom and uniting forces, advance clan affairs, and support public welfare. Apart from the headquarters in San Francisco, 13 branches have been established: New York, Sacramento, Detroit, Boston, Southern California, Chicago, Phoenix, Seattle, Cleveland, Salt Lake City, Houston, Stockton and Columbus. The association conducts myriad events and has established a scholarship fund to award and encourage students with excellent academic performance.
Sam is also a long-time member of the Ying On Merchants & Labor Benevolent Association. The association is a historical Chinese American association that was established during the 19th century for the purpose of promoting, fostering and encouraging the spirit and practice of sociability, fraternity, charity and benevolences among its members and the Chinese community.

Yuet Lee Restaurant is always ready to offer help when there is a need in the community. For instance, on February 3, 2017, which was also the fifth day of the Chinese Lunar New Year, a fire broke out early that morning from one of the commercial units at Golden Plaza which is a 2-story mixed use building located at 1199 Stockton Street in Chinatown. It took the firefighters more than 6 hours to contain the fire. Seven businesses located on the first floor and at least 25 residents living on the second floor were affected and had to evacuate immediately. Most of the residents are seniors. They were provided shelter by Salvation Army Corp Chinatown Community Center on Powell Street. Yuet Lee provided dinners for the first two nights to all those residents who lost their home from the fire.

In addition, since Sam’s restaurant is located at the busy intersection of Stockton Street and Broadway, he has provided help to numerous pedestrians who gotten injured from auto accidents and the elderly who have fallen or tumbled by offering a resting place for the injured while awaiting the paramedics.

Sam is also a big supporter of schools and nonprofit organizations in Chinatown and the neighborhood community. Whenever they have special events or festival celebrations, Yuet Lee Restaurant is always happy to donate food to make the events more joyful. To name a few, these institutes include:

- John Yehall Chin Elementary School
- Jean Parker Elementary School
- Saints Peter and Paul Catholic School
- (The former) St Mary's School
- The Salvation Army
- Self Help for the Elderly
- SFFD Station 2
- SFPD Central Station

Sam is very concerned with all the developments in Chinatown and wellness of Chinatown businesses. He has always been proactive in participating in various community meetings in Chinatown and speaks up on issues affecting the business community, including the Central Subway construction that began in Chinatown in September 2013 and the Broadway Chinatown Streetscape Improvement Project that began in January 2017.

The restaurant received a Certificate of Honor from the San Francisco Board of Supervisors on July 1, 2002, recognizing “Yuet Lee Restaurant as one of San Francisco’s great late-night eating establishments, well known for its outstanding seafood, and to honor its achievement in winning the SF Weekly’s annual ‘Best of San Francisco 2002’ award.” The Board of Supervisors extended its highest commendation.

f. Provide a description of the community the business serves.

Chinatown is a crowded, bustling neighborhood with hundreds of tiny mom-and-pop shops and restaurants. To the experienced traveler, it resembles Hong Kong or Singapore. It primarily serves the large Chinese and Asian population that live and work in San Francisco, although many Asian families travel into the city on the weekends to purchase goods they can only find in the tiny shops in Chinatown. It is a sought-after destination by both young and old who often frequent the shops and restaurants.

Since Chinatown is situated close to the city's financial district, it also has an influx of local business people seeking quick, cheap food where they can eat during their lunch hour.

Besides serving the local population, Chinatown is one of San Francisco's top tourist attractions. Tourists want to have an authentic food experience, unlike what they may have in their hometown mall. The bustling neighborhood attracts not only tourists from China but other Asians as well from Taiwan, Thailand, Laos, Cambodia, Vietnam, Japan and Malaysia. Chinatown is also a destination for American, South American, Canadian and European tourists who want to taste "real" Chinese food. With exposure to TV shows like Anthony Bourdain's Parts Unknown travel food show and Guy Fieri's ventures into exotic foods, people are more open to trying food they've never had before. The hanging ducks and the unidentifiable exotic fruits, vegetables, and spices are not as forbidden to the naïve palate as they once were. More people are open to trying new things.

With the help of websites like Yelp and a variety of food and restaurant mobile apps like Instagram and Twitter, good restaurants like Yuet Lee are being promoted by the public through word of mouth.

g. Is the business associated with a culturally significant building/structure/site/object/interior?

What makes the building distinctive is its bright chartreuse color. You can't miss it! The interior lights that appear really bright at night also help to make it noticeable and draw a lot of attention.

h. How would the community be diminished if the business were to be sold, relocated, shut down, etc.?

Yuet Lee is a cornerstone within the community. Residents and tourists alike would miss its quirky colored building as well as its delicious seafood if it were to close. Located on the well-known Stockton (#30 bus) corridor, the restaurant is a staple within the community and seen by thousands of people every day while walking, driving, or commuting by bus. This restaurant is by far the best place to get great tasting seafood that is melt-in-your-mouth good. The only other places that offer the variety of seafood dishes that Yuet Lee does are on Fisherman's Wharf and they are prepared very differently than Yuet Lee's. Yuet Lee’s distinctive Cantonese seasonings and preparation are unsurpassed.
CRITERION 3

a. Describe the business and the essential features that define its character.

Yuet Lee is a no frills, no reservations accepted kind of place. It's down home Cantonese Chinese food is made from three generations of family recipes. The small footprint limits the number of customers to only 47 people at a time. This causes it to have a long line of customers waiting outside the entrance and alongside the front of the restaurant. The long wait to get in makes people think, "What's so great about this place? I think I should try it!" They are not disappointed.

The restaurant serves authentic Cantonese food. In the United States, this is sometimes called the “Hong Kong style” because of the many immigrants from Hong Kong, originally from the Canton province, who have settled here. Real Cantonese food is cooked differently than the Cantonese food Americans know. The wok is smaller, lighter, and one-handed. Cantonese chefs “throw the wok” when they cook. Also, Cantonese cooking involves more spices than Cantonese American food, especially garlic, and the spices are kept in the wok unlike the American style in which the spices are removed after they have flavored the oil. And in authentic Cantonese cooking, seafood is far more important than in the American version. As the food is cooked, it acquires “wok chi,” or wok energy. Fast hot cooking – 30 seconds or less for some dishes – forces the taste out of the ingredients and gives them wok chi.

The odd bright green color and lighting of Yuet Lee make it very distinctive and adds to the quirkiness and the character of the restaurant.

b. How does the business demonstrate a commitment to maintaining the historical traditions that define the business, and which of these traditions should not be changed in order to retain the businesses historical character? (e.g., business model, goods and services, craft, culinary, or art forms)

Sam Yu, the owner, has been told many times that he should repaint the outside of the restaurant a more conservative color to be more tasteful. He has adamantly refused. "No, I intentionally painted the building that color to attract attention. I like it!" he'll say to anyone that makes that recommendation. As long as Yuet Lee remains within the Yu family, the building will remain that special color green.

The restaurant takes great pride in its time-honored family recipes that have been handed down from one generation to the next. The current food trends of less fat, less oil, and no carbs don't apply at this establishment. This is traditional Cantonese Chinese food from the homeland. It will not change despite the trends that come and go.

The restaurant's interior might be renovated from time to time, with new furniture added, but the fish tank and bright lights will always remain. It's part of the charm of the restaurant.
c. How has the business demonstrated a commitment to maintaining the special physical features that define the business? Describe any special exterior and interior physical characteristics of the space occupied by the business (e.g. signage, murals, architectural details, neon signs, etc.).

The restaurant hasn't changed its façade, exterior color, or interior design and layout for over 20 years. Their customers like the familiar — it's like home and family. All that matters is that the food remains as good as it was when it first opened 41 years ago. Sam, his family, and staff are committed to providing the best traditional Cantonese food in San Francisco. That commitment honors the memory of its original founders, Yuet and Lee. Sam would have it no other way.

d. When the current ownership is not the original owner and has owned the business for less than 30 years; the applicant will need to provide documentation that demonstrates the current owner has maintained the physical features or traditions that define the business, including craft, culinary, or art forms. Please use the list of supplemental documents and/or materials as a guide to help demonstrate the existence of the business prior to current ownership.

Documentation demonstrating that Yuet Lee Restaurant has served authentic Cantonese cuisine since it was founded in 1977 is included in this Legacy Business Registry application.

Chef Ching Yun Pu
TALKING WOKCOKING WITH MR. YU

I served my apprenticeship in a large restaurant in Hong Kong. Before we learned to cook, we had to do the basic tasks of the kitchen. We began by cleaning and starting the fire. Then we were taught to cut up the many foods, each with a different technique. Finally we began to cook, making chow fun and chow mein for the staff. We were taught to cook by tasting the dishes the master chefs made. First we watched them, then we cooked what the master had cooked.

"Our family arrived here five years ago from Hong Kong. We had already opened a Yueh Lee there. Like this one, it is a neighborhood restaurant. Our restaurant is run by the whole family—my brothers all cook here when I’m not working, and that way the food is the same every day. We serve authentic Cantonese food. In America it is called the ‘Hong Kong style’ because of the many Hong Kong immigrants, originally from Canton province, who have now settled in the United States.

"Real Cantonese food is very different from the Cantonese food Americans know. To begin with, it is cooked differently. The wok we use is smaller, lighter, and one-handed. When we cook, we say that we ‘throw the wok.’ Also, we cut each food differently, while the Cantonese American style cuts each food the same way. We use more spices than the Cantonese American cooks, especially garlic, and we keep them in the wok, unlike the American style, where the spices are removed after they have flavored the oil. And in our cooking, fresh seafood is far more important than it is in the American style.

"We say that as the food is cooked it acquires ‘wok chi,’ or wok energy. Fast hot cooking—30 seconds or less for some dishes—forces the taste out of the ingredients and gives them wok chi. The food must then be served very fast. In Hong Kong, on the streets, there is a saying: ‘You cook it, you sell it.’ This is very important. The wok chi disappears if the food is not served immediately."

Michael Yu: Without “wok energy,” a stir-fried pea pod is just another dead plant.

HERE TODAY, GONE TOMORROW

Too often we have heard friends say, "You should have come here last month, when the food was good." The chef must have "quit." They are often right, particularly in the case of Cantonese restaurants, some of which maintain an old-fashioned system of hiring. A contract is signed with the head chef for a fixed wage, which he uses to hire a cisco, 415 982-6020. Lunch and dinner, closed Tuesday. No credit cards. Some of the best wok cooking in San Francisco is done at Yueh Lee by Michael Yu (see box, this page) and his brothers, who work behind a partition, throwing the wok as flames leap high into the sky. We’re small and tend to be crowded, but the food is worth waiting for. Like other Hong Kong–style restaurants, it specializes in seafood, but any dish in the restaurant is bound to be good.

CHUNG KING LOH RESTAURANT, 552 Stev den Ave., Solana Beach, 714 481-0184. Open daily, lunch and dinner. MC. V. It’s tough to classify this restaurant; it calls itself Mandarin but has a number of Shanghai- and Sichuan-style dishes on the menu. It is the only restaurant included in this guide that puts bowls of those dreadful chow mein noodles on each table, but we were so impressed with the fresh clams in black bean sauce and the fresh steamed catfish that we decided to include it in the list of Hong Kong–style restaurants. Also recommended are the car erole dishes and sautéed vegetables.

DIAMOND SEAFOOD RESTAURANT, 724 N. Hill St., Food Center #131, Los Angeles, 213 617-0686. Open daily, lunch and dinner. AE, MC, V. As you enter you pass three large tanks holding live seafood, each for lobster, crab, and fish. This should give you some idea of what to order. Steamed catfish is delicate and tender, crab is superb, lobster is strictly up to your pocketbook. Squid with black bean sauce and the deep-fried scallops are other good choices. Diamond is large, elegantly furnished, and a bit expensive. Dim sum is served at lunch.

LOY’S, 16612 Beach Blvd., Huntington Beach, 714 842-1101. Lunch and dinner, closed Monday. On the outside the sign says Loy’s Chop Suey. Inside, it looks like a simple coffee shop. Nevertheless, the large and loyal Chinese clientele seems to suggest that this is a restaurant that is out of the ordinary. At lunch the cooks prepare a great variety of noodle dishes, including rice noodles, wontons, and steamed dumplings. They do excellent steamed fish and a great number of clay pot dishes as well as the more esoteric offerings, including duck feet and steamed pork with salted fish.

MING’S FAMILY RESTAURANT, 7800 Beach Blvd., Buena Park, 714 522-8355. Open daily, lunch and dinner. AE, DC, MC. V. Ming’s is popular among the Orange County Chinese as a place to give banquets. The menu offers a great many seafood specialties. Our favorites are steamed fish, crispy shrimp in baked salt, and a dish called “eight kinds of seafood” (not on the menu), which contains very tender scallops. There are a few casserole dishes and a great many Hong Kong-style noodles as well.

MON KEE LIVE FISH & SEAFOOD RESTA tA UrAnt, 679 N. Spring St., Los Angeles, 213 628-6717. Open daily, lunch and dinner. MC, V. Many restaurant critics consider Mon Kee to be the best seafood restaurant in Los Angeles. On the menu alone it is an incredible place; each major seafood has a separate category on the menu, and there is a comprehensive listing of freshwater fish, although not all of these are available on any given day. Mon Kee is minimally furnished, and service may be brusque, but since the English language menu is long and well written, you won’t need much help from the waiters.

YOUNG SING SEAFOOD RESTAURANT, 643 N. Spring St., Los Angeles, 213 615-1724. Open daily, lunch and dinner. MC, V. Young Sing is not as well known as Mon Kee, its nearsister, but it has the same nondenot descriptive and the same encyclopedic repertoire of seafood dishes. It also has a very large nonsurf seafood menu. Salted prawns and steamed flounder are two excellent dishes, although any seafood dish is worth ordering.

GOLDEN SHARK RESTAURANT, 404 S. At lantic Blvd., Monterey Park, 213 289-9401. Open daily, lunch and dinner. AE, MC, V. Golden Shark is the closest of all to capturing the style of the grand Hong Kong eating palace. The main dining room is immense, the menu encyclopedic, and the food superb. Golden Shark serves the big dishes of Hong Kong banquet food on its everyday menu. Bird’s nest and shark fin soups are listed as separate categories, as is abalone. One of Hong Kong’s best-known movie stars, Micky Cheung, is the general manager, and he greets you at the door. A few of the house specialties are Bunker cooked two ways (not on the menu and about $25, but worts it), shrimps with spicy salt, grilled boneless chicken with lemon sauce, and braised Japanese abalone with oyster sauce. Golden Shark also serves dim sum.

SEA PALACE, 416D S. Atlantic Blvd., Mon trey Park, 213 282-9104. Open daily, lunch and dinner. AE, CB, DC, MC, V. Of the 50 dishes on the menu, fully half feature fish. There is spicy catfish (catfish la Sichuan), squid in soup (sour potato and squid soup), and the squid’s larger cousin, cuttlefish, served in a garlic sauce. The Sea Palace also serves geoduck (giant clam), sea cucumber, five kinds of crab, and shrimp, prawns, and lobster. Also featured is a full selection of “big” banquet dishes. This is an entirely reliable, authentic restaurant, where the prices are commensurate with the cost of ingredients.
Michael Yu is his name; dramatic wok-cooking is his game. At Yuet Lee in San Francisco, the Hong Kong-style food is as good as the show.

the food now bears a sensational weight and somberness, and the persimmon stoupes (a dry orange with the lamb, overdone beignets for dessert) make it hard to justify the hefty price of dinner, no matter who’s stuck with the bill. (L.S.) 1444 FOURTH ST. (AT MARKET ST.), 415-546-1459. $555

Acme Chophouse

There’s no question that this is the place to be on game days, when the orange-and-black faithful step in for a juicy rib eye and a California Cab. But the bootless dining room has more going for it than a spot within earshot of the crack of the bat. Even in the off-season, people come for a classic chophouse experience that avoids some of the classic chophouse pitfalls. Hefty cuts of meat are naturally raised and hormone-free—some are even grass-fed—and sides dishes are more than just something to push to the side on your way to the meat. Creamed spinach actually bears a relation to the stuff that grows out of the ground, and you could spoil your whole appetite on scoops of rich sautéed potatoes. (L.T.) 14 WILLY WAXEN PLAZA (AT THIRD AND KING STS.), 415-444-0134. $55

Aqua

FINANCIAL DISTRICT

A sea change came to Aqua two years ago with the form of Laurent Manrique, trained in Parisian kitchens that gloried under the light of Michelin stars. Manrique hasn’t shifted Aqua’s seafood focus, but he’s brought more meat into the mix. He sings out a pepper-crusted rib eye, with a punch of sour cherry and olive relish. He combines roasted monkfish, beets, truffle, and veal shank ravioli in a hearty dish without unwieldy come hails. The new chef has done away with queues like lobster pâté–a wonder, well-balanced dishes that dress rustic French traditions in contemporary flair. The bottom line is that Aqua feels well-grounded under Manrique, even if his thoughts are focused on the sea. (L.S.) 1302 CALIFORNIA ST. (AT BATTERY AND POWELL STS.), 415-397-6922. $555

OUTER RICHMOND

When you’re pondering where to take visitors from the Midwest, Aziza is a good bet. They won’t find anything like this back home. In fact, they won’t find anything else like this in San Francisco. A lighter take on Moroccan food, the menu includes some traditional choices done with a California spin: eggplant salad, saffron-scented rice, and lamb shank salt & pepper. The kitchen is committed to local, organic ingredients; the chef’s staff is deft but knowledgeable; and the atmosphere is as eclectic as your best friend’s apartment. The menu changes nightly, boasting dishes like roasted chicken breasts; butter lettuce tossed with a lively mix of plaitchou, roasted garlic, and feta cheese; and a sweet potato and beets dish. (L.L.) 3130 VALLEYS STREET, 415-362-7877. $55

Blupointe

FINANCIAL DISTRICT

If your idea of postwork fun is a stiff drink at an even stiffer citrus-vodka oyster shooter—then Blu-pointe, a new raw bar and restaurant on Emeryville’s Pacific Avenue, is the place to go. Sit and enjoy the views of Treasure Island. Order up a couple dozen local and your-choice-in-season, crisp salads that come with a fiery bell pepper relish, and seafood in one of four sauces, such as red Thai curry or champagne-foam Florentine (with fraîche, of course). And then, well, call it quits, if you’re impossible to turn down a slice of Jay’s pecan pie. One bite tells you all he’s doing is new. (L.L.) 1383 3RD AVE. (AT HOLLANDER ST.), 415-947- 6024. $5

Blue Plate

OUTER RICHMOND

What gets its start as a notable neighborhood ressentiment in 1999 has grown into a staple people cross town for on a regular Tuesday night. Priced to have parents alright upward, but otherwise, it’s the same— if not even better—Blue Plate as before. The kitchen is committed to local, organic ingredients; the chef’s staff is deft but knowledgeable; and the atmosphere is as eclectic as your best friend’s apartment. The menu changes nightly, boasting dishes like roasted chicken breasts; butter lettuce tossed with a lively mix of plaitchou, roasted garlic, and feta cheese; and a sweet potato and beets dish. (L.L.) 3130 VALLEYS STREET, 415-362-7877. $55

Blue Jay Cafe

WESTERN ADDITION

Breakfast always back. People say, though, that something better is bound to come along. Take Jay Foster, former life and business partner of Emmy Fry, of Emmy’s Spaghetti Shack. There’s the silver lining to their split: Jay opened Southern-style Blue Jay. The restaurant is filled with a group of regulars who come craving crispy fried chicken, hunks of cornmeal-crusted catfish, and braised baby back ribs. You get to take your pick of sides, too: glazed yams, creamy garlic mash, or collards. And you might as well consider dessert included, as it’s nearly impossible to turn down a slice of Jay’s pecan pie. One bite tells you all he’s doing is new. (L.L.) 1383 3RD AVE. Chinatown, San Francisco
GRANT AVENUE AREA CODE 415

Following the 1906 earthquake, Chinatown, never before viewed as a travel destination, was rebuilt with curved balconies, gilded facades, and dragon lampposts in the hope of attracting tourists. And did it ever.

The Chinese Historical Society of America Museum (965 Clay St., 391-1188) tells colorful stories of the surrounding streets. For a portrait of today, stroll through Chinatown and you'll see locals examining bins of bok choy alongside tourists pricing bamboo back scratchers.

At Clarion Music Center (816 Sacramento St., 391-1317), play a few bars on the gu zheng, a descendant of the zither. The Wok Shop (718 Grant Ave., 989-3797) is packed with kitchenware including wooden moon cake molds, and Golden Gate Bakery (1029 Grant Ave., 781-2627) sells the silkiest egg custard tarts in town. For a real treat, head to Yuet Lee (1300 Stockton St., 982-6020) and dig into succulent salt-and-pepper prawns the customary way—with your fingers.

The Definitive Guide to the Bay Area's Best

Patricia Untermann • Stan Sesser

For native and visitor alike this is THE definitive restaurant guide. Let Restaurants of San Francisco be your personal guide to the finest the Bay Area has to offer.
We thought that the Washington Square Bar and Grill would make good copy. It has been one of the most popular and beloved establishments in town. We'd eaten there a few times, though we had stopped in for a drink. We invited a couple of journalists to consider the Washington Square Bar and Grill when they were in town. We had reservations, we were afraid we would have to wait. But fifteen minutes later the maître d' showed us to a table. A good management, we thought.

Weah it was a Friday night. There were no tables in the dining room, and the din was fierce. Although we had reservations, we were afraid we would have to wait. But fifteen minutes later the maître d' showed us to a table. A good management, we thought.

1 レストランのあるブティックが流行中

最近ニューヨークでは、ブティックにレストランやドリンクコーナーを設けたのが流行中。どうやら、書店「バンズ・アンド・ノールズ」にスタイリッシュな雰囲気があるのを見て、誰かが取り入れたのが断言できる。そうこうした変化に、とりあえずお酒を飲むだけ、ご飯でも食べてもゆっくり考えてもらうという施設も、もちろん、レストランのみの利用も可能だ。

中でも今一番の人気の店が、「プレート」。ロケーションも、トレンドのところに、外からは、中にはレストランがあることはわからず、店名でプチブティックにしか見えない。だが、店内に入るとまずバーや、周りには他では見つけられないような個体性の素敵なジュエリー、洋服、雑貨などが陳列されている。女性たちも誰かに見られると、とりあえずは、バーでお酒を楽しみながらゆっくり見ようと思ってくる。レストランもあるから、外に出ることもない。

トレンドを読むファッションと同じく、料理も今流行中のアラートラムをミックスしたフレッシュな場所ないしは、流行に敏感な若者で、店は毎日満席だ。特筆すべきはエリアで、ドリオの代わりにホームソースを使っていること、サラダの代わりにアタナと呼ばれるナチュラルなプロセスを利用し、ジェイミンライスを使ったフレッシュスパイススタイル。アジアとラテンアメリカ料理は共通するものが多く、どの料理もほどよく混じり合い、なかなかの味が出ている。

Food writer and TV host Anthony Bourdain loved San Francisco and visited often to film episodes for his travel and food shows.

When visiting a city, Bourdain was known for eating at hole-in-the-wall restaurants frequented by locals, and in SF he put many of these on the map.

In one classic exploration, he discovered "That's It Market," a sandwich shop inside a liquor store where Cuban tortas are stuffed with fresh meats. Of the greasy spoon Sam's Pizza and Burgers, he said, "I never thought a hamburger could be good at a place that also serves pizza!"

ALSO: People are sharing their favorite Anthony Bourdain quotes and

His first stop in the city was always the Swan Oyster Depot that he called, "a touchstone in my worldwide wanderings. A happy zone" in a 2015 episode of "Parts Unknown."

He added, "If I read about myself dying at this counter I'd say to myself, 'That was one lucky guy.'"
The Culinary State of San Francisco’s Chinatown

They may not be trendy or pushing the boundaries, but the traditional restaurants of Chinatown remain true to their purpose

People love to suggest that the “authenticity” of Chinatown has evaporated—that Chinese Americans have moved out in droves and that the best dim sum can now be found elsewhere, in places like the western Sunset or the East Bay. But those naysayers, who choose to paint an entire neighborhood as no longer of relevance, couldn’t be more wrong. While there’s no doubt that Chinatown has changed over the past few decades, it’s far from a relic.

I’ve lived in Chinatown for the past 20 years, getting to know the restaurants and the markets, the neighbors and the shopkeepers, the quirks and the charms. The sense of community and tradition run deep here; it’s not hard to see just how crucial of a role the neighborhood still plays in the local Chinese American community. Pick any day to take a stroll down Stockton Street, and you’ll see floods of Chinese people from the neighborhood and elsewhere in the Bay milling about, ducking in and out of shops like New Luen Sing Fish Market and Dong Hing Supermarket, plying their way through bags of bok choy and Chinese greens like yow choy and tong ho. It’s not just the older crowd either—teens continue to fill places like Uniq Salon and S & P Fashion Design Hair Studio, getting their hair done in the latest trendy K-pop and C-pop styles.

Yes, you may be able to find more innovative and trendy Chinese restaurants around the Bay Area, but those new establishments don’t take away from the authenticity of Chinatown’s own eateries, many of which continue decades of service and uphold a tradition of a neighborhood restaurant serving neighbors food they crave.

When it comes to food, Chinatown has always been a culinary destination in SF, with longstanding restaurants serving up affordable, delicious regional cuisines of China. Some may complain about their environments, but they remain as busy and beloved as ever even as new, fancier ones have popped up, like China Live. Yes, you may be able to find more innovative and trendy Chinese restaurants around the Bay Area, but those new establishments don’t take away from the authenticity of Chinatown’s own eateries, many of which continue decades of service and uphold a tradition of a neighborhood restaurant serving neighbors food they crave.

San Francisco’s Chinatown arose in the 1850s due to the need of immigrants from China—mostly from Guangdong in the southern part of the country—to have a place to live. The construction of the Transcontinental Railroad especially drew in such immigrants to San Francisco, along with the gold rush. The City of San Francisco permitted the area to welcome Chinese immigrants and allow their property to be deeded to them and passed down to future generations. With these incentives, Chinese people gravitated to the area, and many businesses, including restaurants, sprung up here to cater to them.

While the vast majority of Chinatown restaurants serve Cantonese dishes (including dim sum), it’s home to at least eight major cuisines of China—Anhui, Cantonese, Fujian, Hunan, Jiangsu, Shandong, Sichuan and Zhejiang—as well as many more lesser known cuisines. Of course, much of what we encounter now across United States as “Chinese food” is a cousin a few times removed from authentic Chinese food. In any Chinatown, whether in SF or New York City or elsewhere, people expect to eat more authentic food, food that Chinese people want to eat and not the Americanized version. At their smartest, SF Chinatown restaurants have done just that, creating food for their peers and staying close to their roots.

SF Chinatown is special for the sheer number of regional fare available here. While the vast majority of restaurants serve Cantonese dishes (including dim sum), it’s home to at least eight major cuisines of China—Anhui, Cantonese, Fujian, Hunan, Jiangsu, Shandong, Sichuan and Zhejiang—as well as many more lesser known cuisines. It can be hard to know where to look for the best fare, but there are dozens of both well-known and lesser-known places serving up incredible food, places like the following:

- Hong Kong Clay Pot Restaurant, a bastion of the type of comfort food Cantonese Americans have depended on, including savory chicken, lamb or seafood clay pots; Shanghai-style spare ribs; West Lake beef soup; and Kam Lok’s signature steamed ginger chicken and fish dishes.
- Yuet Lee Seafood, which serves up Cantonese-style seafood—think salt-and-pepper squid, garlic crabs, clams with black bean sauce and sides of steamed bok choy—into the wee hours of the night, drawing lines of club-goers, students and police officers on the night beat—an experience similar to late-night Hong Kong snacks.

- Hang Ah Tea Room, the oldest purveyor of dim sum in the city and possibly the country, along with Yank Sing, which reigns supreme for a nice sit-down dim sum meal in an atmosphere appropriate for business lunches or visiting relatives, and Delicious Dim Sum, a good spot for quick to-go dishes like har gow, shumai and other dumplings.

- Good Mong Kok Bakery, a Hong Kong–style bakery known for its steamed pork buns, steamed rice rolls and dumplings, as well as sweet and savory baked goods (hot tip: get the pineapple buns).

- Z & Y Restaurant, a bulwark of Sichuan in the neighborhood. It may now be a bit overly trendy since president Barack Obama and other luminaries have paid a visit, but it’s still a tasty spot serving classic Sichuan spicy dishes such as lamb with peppercorns, Hunan-style chicken, Dongpo pork and dandan noodles. The much newer Chong Qing Xiao Mian focuses on Sichuan noodle dishes, a staple of the regional cuisine.

- Bund Shanghai, featuring Shanghainese cuisine with the famed xiaolongbao, or “soup dumplings,” plus yang chun noodles, lion’s head (beef meatballs) and a variety of plump steamed buns both large and small.

I could go on. As you can see, with such delicious fare continuing to be served, I don’t fear the importance of Chinatown restaurants slipping. Both tourists and locals are still drawn here, a historic and vibrant place where they can taste a variety of Chinese fare in one walk, which is much easier to do in Chinatown than in the Inner Sunset or Outer Richmond. If you’re still skeptical of Chinatown, you should go and hang around, observing for yourself someone trying to carry an impossibly large rice cooker out of a housewares store or people wandering in and out of Louie Bros Book Store clutching magazines from Hong Kong or rare Chinese books on special order. They’re all the daily signs of a very vibrant community at play and at work—and certainly out and about for lunch or dinner, when the time comes.

With so much talk of Chinatown “not being what it used to be,” it’s as if the chattering class would prefer that the neighborhood succumb to a loss of authenticity and be little more than the vast collection of tacky stores selling Asian-themed gifts and furnishings to tourists over on Grant Avenue. But that hasn’t—and won’t—happen.
U.S. Yee Fung Toy Headquarters - A Brief Introduction

The first ancestor of Yee Clan is the Revered Yee Chung-Sheung, a prominent personage of the North Sung Dynasty, named Jing as a child, On-Doh when grown up, and Moo-Kai as a form of address. Fung Toy (elegant demeanor), a beautiful name, originated from a congratulatory line of poetry by his contemporary Choy Sheung: "Surely your strategies benefit the Emperor's reign, and your elegant demeanor uplifts spirits of court ministers."

Yee clansmen immigrated into the U.S. years ago. In 1886 (the 21st year of Gwang-shui Emperor, Ching Dynasty), early clansmen organized the Sheung-Shin Hall Hundred Person Association, to cherish memory of ancestral virtues and promote clansmen relations. Funds were collected to purchase the property at 131 Waverly Place in Chinatown of San Francisco, to establish the Yee Family Association, whereby clansmen could offer ancestral sacrifice and enjoy family happiness. The April -1906 S.F. earthquake burned down the property.

In winter of the same year, clansmen reorganized the association under the name Sheung-yik Hall Hundred-Person Association. They reconstructed the Fung Toy House, which exists as the four-story building as seen today, with the name Yee Fung Toy Moo-kai Headquarters. The building went through a renovation in 1958. A resolution was also passed at a general meeting to adopt the standard name the U.S. Yee Fung Toy Headquarters there after.

Apart from the Headquarters, 13 branches have been established in New York, Sacramento, Detroit, Boston, Southern California, Chicago, Phoenix, Seattle, Cleveland, Salt Lake City, Houston, Stockton and Columbus respectively. Branches conduct clan affairs and connect members within areas of jurisdiction. The Yee clansmen in the U.S. number over 10,000, which includes, registered or not, new and old immigrants, the U.S. born, both genders old and young.

Yee Fung Toy Headquarters' purpose is to make friendly contacts among clansmen, work for their well-being by pooling wisdom and uniting forces, advance clan affairs, and support public welfare. All U.S. branches meet every three years at a general meeting, to discuss reform, revise the constitution, and elect the grand president. This general meeting is Yee Fung Toy's highest organization.

The Headquarters conducts myriad clan affairs: Spring events -- New Year's Eve Reunion, New Year Opening, Offering Ancestral Sacrifice, Spring Banquet; other yearly events -- Dragon Boat Festival, Mid-autumn Festival, Winter Solstice Party; other meaningful activities --Ching-ming and Chung-yang tributes to ancestors' tombs, the fall outing party, Christmas gifts for children, winter visit to elderly clansmen in nursing homes. Clansmen participate well.

As to overseas Chinese public welfare and charitable causes, we always try our best. Since 1958, the Headquarters has established a scholarship fund to award clan juniors with excellent academic performance and encourage them toward goals to benefit the multitude. This educational undertaking of decades wins loud applause from the overseas Chinese sector. In 1996, the U.S.-Five Tong Associations Liaison Committee got the Hong Kong Five Tongs to agree to a one-time appropriation of US $1,000,000 for establishing the Hong Kong Five Tong Associations Scholarship Foundation in the U.S. Annually, $35,000 of the interest earned will be set aside to continue the U.S. Five Tong Associations Scholarship Program. Of this $35,000, $3,500 is to go to the Canada Yee Fung Toy Headquarters for scholarship awards throughout Canada. Also, as of 2004, on a yearly basis, Yee Fung Toy Headquarters allocates US $4,000 from the Moo-kai Education and Welfare Funds, for scholarships to distribute to Yee clan juniors back in the native village, four middle schools, through the help of Hong Kong Yee Family Associations. This is to implement the equitable ideal that we care about all Yee juniors, inland or overseas.
